Carbon to get Pocono arts center

STROUDSBURG — Although Tropical Storm Agnes left Monroe County virtually unscathed it appears to have washed away all hope of having Governor Milton Shapp's art center in the Poconos located in the Stroudsburg area.

The art center appeared on a list of items recommended to the legislature by the governor for immediate passage under a title of flood relief measures. It's proposed location—at the Francis E. Walter Dam in Carbon Counties.

Norval Reese, a Shapp aide, said the governor reached his decision when the unemployment rate skyrocketed after the flood in that area. The planned construction of the culture center would provide "thousands of jobs" to flood victims in the Wilkes-Barre, Hazleton and Kingston area, he said.

Robert Uguccioni, executive director of the Pocono Mountains Vacation Bureau in Stroudsburg, expressed enthusiasm concerning the art center and it's location. He is also a member of the governor's Art Center Site Selection Council.

Uguccioni said the proposal to locate the center at the Francis E. Walter Dam recreation area, some 50,000 acres, was not voted on by the site selection council but had been an area of "highest priority" and consideration even before the flood.

Another prime spot being considered was the Pocono Art Center grounds in Minisink Hills near East Stroudsburg.

After hearing of the governor's proposal, Mrs. Marcia Clapp DeRocco, founder and chairman of the board of directors of the Pocono Art Center, said, "We are pleased there be another cultural center and hope for many more."

The Pocono Art Center site was offered to the state Feb. 8 by the art center board and it was hoped the two could merge their resources and create the largest cultural center in the eastern United States.

Mrs. DeRocco said plans for groundbreaking at the Pocono Art Center later this summer would not be affected by the governor's proposed location of the state facility near White Haven.

"I understand his decision was influenced by the blight in that area since the flood," she said. "Our area is not blighted and we plan to provide a cultural and performing art center here for the residents of the community, our students at East Stroudsburg State College, the local schools, and visitors to use and enjoy."

Speaking from the governor's office, Reese said the actual decision to construct the art center at the Francis E. Walter Dam site was arrived at "a couple of months ago."

"This was the prime location they settled on," he said. "It's been on the board for awhile but the governor decided to expedite the project and it has been moved up front and center. It was decided the dam site had the best natural and geographic setting and that's why it was chosen.

Uguccioni said the site selection council is scheduled to meet next week in Harrisburg and he has a "pretty good idea what it will be about."

Although there was no official mention made, it is expected Gov. Shapp's Art Center Site Selection Council will be called upon to endorse the proposal.

Eagleton had psychiatric care

CUSTER, S.D. (UPI)—Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton went before a news conference Tuesday and said he had received psychiatric care three times in the past 12 years, including electric shock treatment twice. Sen. George S. McGovern said he has full faith in his running mate and he would stay on the ticket.

During the emotional session Eagleton, standing beside McGovern said he entered hospitals in 1960, 1964 and 1966 for treatment of "nervous exhaustion and fatigue and manifestations of depression."

He received counseling and electric shock treatments at various times and also administered sleeping pills, Eagleton said.

"As a younger man, I drove myself too hard," Eagleton said, adding that his first hospital stay came after strenuous campaigning. "I am still an intense person. I push pretty hard. But I've learned to pace myself."

Eagleton said he is "in good, solid, sound health" now and underwent a complete medical examination in Washington last weekend.

McGovern expressed full support for his running mate, saying "I think Tom Eagleton is fully qualified in mind, body and spirit to be vice president and if necessary to take over the presidency of the United States on a moment's notice."

Later, in an interview with ABC television, McGovern said Eagleton will "absolutely" stay on the ticket and "I'll do everything I can to discourage any move on his part to leave the ticket."

McGovern added, "He's not considering that thought, by the way."

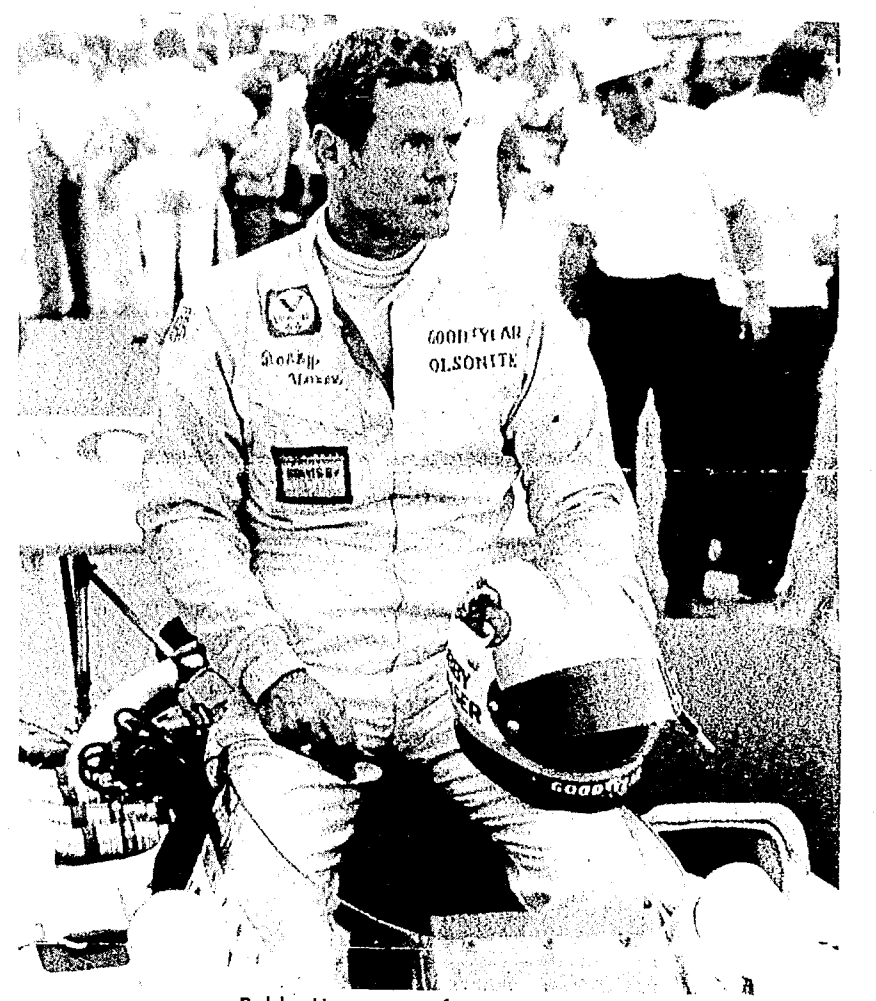

Official reaction to Eagleton's disclosure was cautious. Vice President Agnew, campaigning on the west coast, had "no comment" and in Washington, deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said, "We wouldn't comment on that."

Reaction in McGovern's camp, at his vacation retreat in the Black Hills, was guarded. One high aide, who asked not to be identified, said, "We'll have to wait and see."

Many advisers to McGovern felt since the disclosure was made voluntarily and came four months prior to the election, its impact may wear off by November. McGovern himself went to play tennis as Eagleton left for campaign appearances on the West Coast.

McGovern's press secretary, Richard Dougherty, said McGovern's staff had checked out rumors that Eagleton had a history of nervous disorders and alcoholism before McGovern selected him as his running mate. No confirmation was found, Doughtery said.

Missouri associates of Eagleton said they knew he often worked himself to the point of exhaustion. Jeremiah D. Finnegan, who worked under Eagleton as an assistant Missouri attorney general, said, "He was a hypertensive person who often worked himself to the point of physical exhaustion."

Wage control lifted

WASHINGTON — More than 10 million low wage earners were given a hefty break by having their $1.90 an hour wage exemption level lifted to $2.75 an hour. A court order prodded the Cost of Living Council to exempt workers making less than the $2.75 from the Pay Board wage controls. The action means 56 out of every 100 workers in the private non-farm economy are now exempt from pay controls in addition to any government employes and farm workers earning less than $2.75 an hour.

Employment may be inflationary

WASHINGTON — The administration and congressional Democrats clashed over whether enough federal spending to cut deeply into unemployment would trigger a new round of inflation. Democrats charged the administration fears inflation so much it would calmly tolerate five million people on the unemployment rolls. The administration charged Democrats were still embracing "the old myth that you solve problems by lavishing federal cash on them."

Disease program probed

ATLANTA — The U.S. Center for Disease Control began an investigation into a 40-year medical experiment in which 400 Alabama blacks with syphilis were not treated for it, even when penicillin became available. The program, which started in 1932, was designed to compare the effects on health of blacks who had venereal disease with those who were not affected. But when modern penicillin treatment became available in 1946, the blacks with the disease were still not given treatment.

College dean shot

NEW YORK — The dean of students of Columbia University was shot five times in the chest, arms and head Tuesday afternoon while sitting in his campus office. Police are seeking a disgruntled student who had flunked out of school. Dean Henry Coleman, 46, was listed in serious condition. Doctors believe Coleman will survive. The prime suspect is Eldridge McKinney, 20, of Chicago, who finished his sophomore year in June.

Blacksville mine sealed

BLACKSVILLE — The Blacksville No. One coal mine in this West Virginia mining community, cited for 485 safety violations since it opened four years ago, was sealed Tuesday, making it the tomb of nine miners given up for dead. The nine victims, who had a total of 16 children, were members of a 40-man maintenance crew preparing the mine for the regular work force. The other 31 escaped minutes after a fire broke out Saturday night.

Troops ordered home

SAIGON — Three thousand U.S. troops ended their combat roles Tuesday leaving a single battalion as the last American ground combat unit in South Vietnam. Among the 19 units ordered home was the last remnant of the 1st Air Cavalry Division, the first U.S. Army division to go to war in helicopters. The number of servicemen in Vietnam is expected to be 39,000 by Sept. 1. Peak troop strength was 543,400 in April, 1969.

State wants to cut hospital cost by regulating growth

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Caution: Hospital costs may be hazardous to your health.

The warning forms the basis for two bills under study in the House and Senate. They would prohibit a hospital from buying expensive new equipment or expanding unless the community needed additional health care.

According to author Dr. Lenard Bachman, Gov. Milton J. Shapp's health adviser, the proposal can cut the costs of getting well by forcing hospitals to trim their budgets.

Basically, it means the state government will assume the powers of setting prices in the health field, Bachman said.

"The percentage of hospital beds occupied in the state is going down every year," he said. "This is an indication we're learning how to treat people in other ways.

"It shows you have to think hard before you put in another hospital bed anywhere."

Bachman said the flood emergency gave the Health Department an idea of how excessive the hospital system is.

"In the Wyoming Valley we've lost half our hospital beds," he said in an interview.

"Two of the three hospitals were destroyed. What we found was that despite the loss, we don't have a shortage. Now that's kind of scary."

Under the present system, a hospital can expand then pass the bill along to the patients through Medicare or Blue Cross.

"They basically have 'cost plus' contracts, meaning they can put anything they need on the bill," he said. "All the incentives are toward expansion because the money will always be provided."

Bachman said hospital overexpansion is a health hazard not only because of steep prices but also because it takes the emphasis away from out-patient services.

"Our present system is designed to unbalance health care — to increase the importance of highly skilled specialists and take it away from ambulatory care and other health services," he said.

"While the hospitals expand unnecessarily, we are desperately short of primary care — where you go right in to a doctor's office when you are sick."

The bill would apply only to new construction. Any hospitals and nursing homes already in existence automatically would receive a certificate of need whether it was needed or not.

"We can't remove facilities which already have been built," he said, "but this will provide a process where at least future growth can be rationally controlled."

The Hospital Association of Pennsylvania has asked for a moratorium on this and all other hospital-related bills. It is a position which Bachman called "invalid," but legislative leaders seem to agree.

House unit okays troop withdrawal

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Endorsing an antiwar amendment for the first time, the House Foreign Affairs Committee voted 18 to 17 Tuesday to order a total U.S. withdrawal from Indochina by Oct. 1, subject only to a prisoner release and safety for departing American forces.

The vote, coming only six weeks after the same committee endorsed President Nixon's latest peace proposals by a similar one-vote margin, put new life into a congressional antiwar uprising.

As antiwar senators led by Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., re-introduced their amendment Tuesday, the House committee approved its own $2.1 billion version of the military aid bill with its own withdrawal terms.

'Mr. Records' Bobby Unser sets fast pace at Pocono

(Related story, pictures, page 12)

By MAUREEN RUFE
Pocono Record Reporter

LONG POND — It was like the setting for a dramatic movie at the Pocono International Raceway late Tuesday afternoon. The sky grew dark, a streak of lightning bolted down toward turn three, and a crowd full of "extras" shook the grandstands with their stammering feet, demanding to see Bobby Unser qualify for Saturday's Schaefer 500.

It was 7:30 p.m.; qualifications officially ended one minute earlier, and "Mr. Records" turned off his engine, thinking his chance at the pole was put off for another day. Suddenly United States Auto Club officials gave the go ahead to the Olsonite Eagle and minutes later the star of the show, Bobby Unser, won the pole after clocking a one-lap record speed of 190.40 miles per hour.

Chalking up an average speed of 189.473 miles per hour during his four runs, the former Indy winner broke Mark Donohue's 1971 track record of 172.393.

When it was all over, the modest, even-tempered driver, commented simply about the ride, "It was not too bad."

Obviously concerned that he might not be able to qualify, Unser added, "I am a helluva lot happier than I was a few minutes ago when I thought I couldn't run."

Unser said the car performed beautifully and stressed that his crew deserved more credit than he did for snagging his eighth straight pole position.

"I'm sure this is going to be a fast race this year," he said, "because the track is in better condition and is a lot faster. Cars this year will be at least 10 miles an hour faster because of the track alone."

When asked about the late qualification, Bobby said he didn't think it mattered that USAC extended the day's schedule to allow he and Mario Andretti to make their bid for the pole.

Because the track was cooled down, there was some speculation that Bobby might have an extra edge of two or three miles per hour, but Unser said he didn't really think he had any advantage with the late run.

Waiting on line to qualify however, it looked as if there was only one word to describe Unser and the Gurney team; that word was "confidence". Unser was his jovial self, quipping with fellow drivers, and his son, Bobby Jr., a member of the crew, said that the team had gotten it all together.

Commenting on the speed he attained, the 38-year-old Albuquerque, N.M., resident said he didn't think 190 (qualifying speed) was possible.

"I would have been happy to knock off 187 or 188; I didn't expect to hit 190," he said. "The wings are definitely getting me through the turns faster, but it's a combination of things that contribute to the time."

When asked if the speed of 190 miles per hour was unsafe, Unser responded without any hesitation:

"It is just another number and it is certainly not unsafe. Racing is safer this year than it was ever before. The numbers impress people, but the idea is to drive the car as fast as it will go," he said. "It's not just a question of the car getting unsafe."

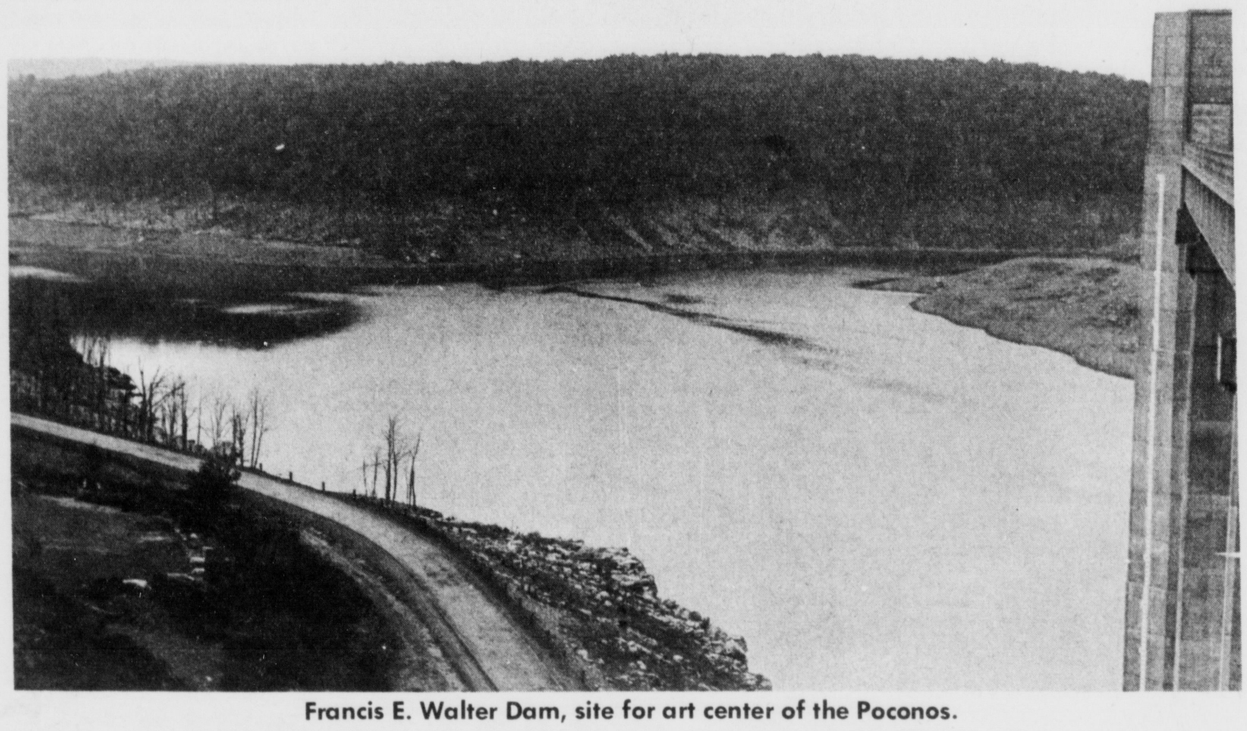

"This track is relatively hard track to drive because it has three types of turns that are completely different," said the former USAC champion. "You have to look at each turn differently, and set the car at some intermediate level to take all three of them."

When asked how he felt about the stock car qualifications laying down extra rubber on the track this week, Bobby said it would be better for everybody because the groove would be widened considerably.

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Endorsing an antiwar amendment for the first time, the House Foreign Affairs Committee voted 18 to 17 Tuesday to order a total U.S. withdrawal from Indochina by Oct. 1, subject only to a prisoner release and safety for departing American forces.

As antiwar senators led by Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., re-introduced their amendment Tuesday, the House committee approved its own $2.1 billion version of the military aid bill with its own withdrawal terms.

Eagleton's associates not surprised by treatment

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI)—Missouri associates of Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton Tuesday remembered him as a hard-working attorney general who often pushed himself too hard but seldom showed the strain.

The stunning announcement by the Democratic vice presidential candidate that he had undergone psychiatric care three times in the past 12 years came as no surprise to his former co-workers. But, they said, they were surprised that anyone would consider Eagleton as having been ill.

"It never even occurred to me to think of him as ill, or anything of that nature, said Lon DeFeo, an assistant under Eagleton and now a lobbyist.

Two of the hospitalizations — in 1960 and 1966 —came after hard-fought election campaigns. Eagleton's associates said they were simply trips to recover from normal exhaustion.

"He was a hypertensive person who often worked himself to the point of physical exhaustion," said Jeremiah D. Finnegan, an assistant attorney general under Eagleton for two years. "When he got on a project, he put himself into it and used all of his resources to bring it to an end."

Eagleton was elected attorney general in 1960, and served in that position until he was inaugurated lieutenant governor in 1965. He was elected to the Senate in 1968.

A "whispering campaign" against Eagleton was carried on by some senatorial opponents. It was not uncommon for newsmen to hear rumors that he was about to have a mental breakdown and suffered from mental problems.

During the 1968 campaign, Eagleton often appeared nervous and in need of sleep, but he never complained. Newsmen noticed his hands sometimes shook during conferences or while speaking but he appeared alert and showed no other signs of nervousness.

"As far as I was concerned, he handled the attorney general's office better than anybody before or since," said Finnegan, now general counsel for the Missouri Public Service Commission.

John F. Britton, one of Eagleton's closest associates, said he never knew a time when Eagleton failed to function with top ability.

"He sometimes went to his dad's place in Michigan and went to Mayo's, but that 1964 trip (to Mayo) was for ulcers," Britton said. "He couldn't eat and he was losing weight, but I was unaware that there were ever any mental difficulties — other than total physical exhaustion. He functioned well even during those times."

Britton worked for Eagleton briefly in 1964 as an administrative assistant before opening his lobbying firm.

"There never were any mental problems showing," said John H. Denman, now executive secretary of the Missouri Oil Council. "I certainly saw no evidence whatsoever of anything of that sort."

Denman, an assistant attorney general from 1962 to 1965, said Eagleton often was under heavy strain, but kept his composure at all times.

Treatments cited as quite common

By United Press International

A survey of psychiatrists Tuesday showed a nearly universal opinion that electric shock treatments, such as those vice presidential candidate Sen. Thomas Eagleton said he had undergone, were common in psychiatry and not indicative of a debilitating illness.

Most doctors interviewed by United Press International correspondents around the country were hesitant, to comment specifically on Eagleton's case.

Dr. John E. Nardini of Washington, deputy chief of psychiatry at Sibley Hospital and chief of attending services at the Psychiatric Institute of D.C., said electroshock therapy has "a very high index of success" in relieving depression in patients.

Nardini said some psychiatrists feel shock treatment "should be used for more severe forms of depression, others for lesser forms." But he said the degree of depression was not the proper criteria for determining who should receive the therapy. A more useful guide, he said, was the patient's response to other treatment. If these fail to work, shock treatments might, he said.

"In my hands patients have shown a 95 per cent success rate," he said. Asked to define "success," Nardini replied, "Feeling well, normal, not depressed."

He said the average electroshock patient receives treatment between six and eight times, "but sometimes fewer is helpful." Nardini said he had prescribed the treatment for "hundreds, quite a few hundred" patients.

Dr. David Wade, Texas Commissioner of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, said electric shock treatment "has no lasting effects whatever.

"Such an individual can go back to work and many have done so on many occasions. We have treated many professional people who have gone back to their work with no trouble at all," Dr. Wade said.

Trade deficit predicted

HAKONE, Japan (UPI)—A member of President Nixon's economic team said Tuesday the United States may lose $4 billion in foreign trade in 1972 for its worst showing in history.

Ambassador Harold B. Malmgren, Nixon's deputy special representative for trade negotiations, also said the 16.88 per cent revaluation of the yen forced on Japan last December has so far failed to cut Japan's hefty trade profits.

Malmgren's statements to newsmen came at the end of the first day of a four-day Japanese - American economic conference. Its aim is to reduce Japan's swelling trade surplus with the United States which U.S. Commerce Department economists say may reach $3.8 billion this year.

Both governments agree on the need to limit America's business losses in dealing with Japan, which have exceeded $1 billion yearly since 1968.

Malmgren said Japan has warded off much of the effect of the revaluation of the yen by cutting prices of the manufactured goods it exports.

Other proposals studied

Lawmakers still hope for pay hikes

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The controversy over legislative pay hikes entered "Phase II" Tuesday as lawmakers privately debated whether to try to increase salaries during an election year.

Their original plan was to silently accept the recommendations of the Commonwealth Compensation Commission report which is scheduled to automatically become law on Aug. 21.

But Gov. Milton J. Shapp forced them to abandon the plan Monday when he called an emergency legislative session for Aug. 15 specifically to consider flood relief and the pay increases.

The lawmakers conceded Tuesday that the 62 per cent pay hike proposed by the commission was dead. They predicted it would be soundly voted down before the Aug. 21 date.

But they indicated the movement to increase salaries is still alive in a new form.

Most legislators were reluctant to speak for the record about the new plans.

Sen. Thomas F. Lamb, D-Allegheny, Senate Majority Leader, confirmed he had asked his legal staff to explore ways of changing the report, but he added: "I have no idea what is going on."

Members of the General Assembly currently receive a $7,200 annual salary plus $8,400 in unaccountable expenses. The commission recommended that they receive $19,200 in salary plus $6,000 in accountable expenses, or a total 62 per cent increase.

One idea discussed Tuesday was to reject the commission's recommendation and start over with a new bill.

The new bill would take the current total of $15,600 and increase it by 5.5 per cent — the percentage generally accepted by the federal pay board. In addition, it would give the 253 lawmakers $6,000 in accountable expenses.

A spokesman for the Pay Board, Erick Kanter, said both maneuvers "could be acceptable" according to federal rules.

He said that unaccountable expense money "in general" counts as salary, so the 5.5 per cent increase on salaries plus expenses could be justified.

Howard said committee members were discussing the release of several "reform" bills such as one to limit the size of the General Assembly. The bills would be passed at the same time as the increase.

Long term loans proposed for railroads by senators

By MARK BROWN
Ottaway News Service
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Sens. Hugh Scott and Richard Schweiker (R.-Pa.) have co-sponsored legislation which would provide up to $40 million in long-term federal loans for railroads damaged during last month's floods.

The bill revises legislation previously introduced by the Pennsylvania senators which would have authorized $60 million for railroad recovery.

Co-sponsors of an identical bill in the house include Reps. Joseph McDade (R.-Pa.) and Herman Schneebeli (R. Pa.).

The proposal has been approved by the office of management and budget and department of transportation, and will have administration support when taken up by congress.

The measure authorizes $40 million in loans to railroads which have experienced net operating losses during either of the last two years.

The funds are to assist in restoring equipment, service and facilities, including bridges, signal and communications systems and rolling stock damaged by the flooding of Hurricane Agnes.

While the revised proposal eliminates outright grants, a Rooney aide explained, it contains more liberalized loan repayment terms.

Heath refuses to enter dispute

LONDON (UPI)—Prime Minister Edward Heath, almost drowned out by Labor opposition catcalls and shouts of "chicken!" angrily refused Tuesday to intervene to obtain the release of five longshoremen jailed for contempt of court.

"The government is not going to interfere or attempt to overrule the courts of this land," he shouted above the din of a rowdy House of Commons.

The jailing of the five longshoremen Friday plunged Britain into industrial chaos as protest strikes snowballed across the country. The five defied a National Industrial Relations court order to cease illegal picketing of container depots.

Thousands of striking dockers and others workers marched behind flying trade union banners to London's fortresslike Pentonville prison to demand release of the five.

One group hijacked two red doubledecker London buses and a large trailer truck and blocked Caledonian Road outside the jail.

Several hundred police reinforcements were rushed up and cleared the roadway.

Heath told Parliament about 80,000 workers have walked off the job, including 50,000 longshoremen.

He called on Labor opposition leader Harold Wilson to urge the five to accept the court's ruling. Wilson had demanded their release and repeal of the government's Industrial Relations Act.

The official court solicitor (lawyer) Norman Turner visited the five men in jail Tuesday morning. He said they refused their option to "purge" their contempt by apologizing to the court. But he said he was applying for a court for their release.

Police estimated between 5,000 and 10,000 longshoremen and other workers marched from Tower Hill, near the Tower of London, to protest outside Pentonville jail.

Champions adjourn chess match

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (UPI) — The seventh game of the world championship chess match between U.S. grand master Bobby Fischer and titleholder Boris Spassky of the Soviet Union was adjourned Tuesday after the 40th move. Spassky, playing white, wrote his 41st move and sealed it in an envelope to be opened at the beginning of play Wednesday.

Spassky, playing from his own leather swivel chair, went beyond his regulation time and on his 41st move studied the board for 45 minutes before adjourning the game.

Committee would name successor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An emergency session of the Democratic National Committee would be called to nominate a vice presidential candidate for the party ticket if Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton should step aside.

Like the old party rules, the new rules of the Democratic party authorize the committee to fill a vacancy on the national ticket caused by "death, resignation or disability." The committee includes representatives from each of the 50 states, plus the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the three territories.

However, members from each of the states and five other small blocs would cast votes in proportion to their representation at the national convention rather than the number alloted them for regular national committee operations.

A majority of the votes presumably would be cast in accord with the advice of Sen. George S. McGovern, the Democratic presidential nominee.

The enlarged national committee is composed of 303 members with 244 votes. Of the 303, the national party headquarters said 40 had not yet been chosen or their credentials are under challenge.

In filling a vacancy on the national ticket, the committee would have 3,016 votes with 1,509 needed for a majority.

Conflicting reports given

Troops recapture capital

SAIGON (UPI)—The South Vietnamese military command said government troops Tuesday recaptured all of Quang Tri city, breaking an 86-day North Vietnamese occupation and rule of this country's northernmost provincial capital.

There were conflicting reports, however, on the extent of the victory and how it was achieved.

The command spokesman, Lt. Col. Le Trung Hien, said in Saigon that South Vietnamese troops walked unopposed at mid-morning into the Quang Tri Citadel, a 19th century walled fortress within the city and the last bastion of North Vietnamese resistance there.

But sources near the Quang Tri battle front and in Saigon as well said house-to-house fighting was continuing Tuesday in Quang Tri. They said about 500 government troops came under heavy North Vietnamese fire when they rushed the Citadel Tuesday morning through holes blasted in the 20-foot thick brick and mortar walls of the fortress.

In the air war, the U.S. command said American planes flew 260 strikes against military targets in North Vietnam Monday and one of the raiding planes, an F4 Phantom, was shot down by a North Vietnamese MIG interceptor 24 miles southeast of Haiphong. The command spokesman said both crewmen of the Phantom were rescued.

The command also announced the loss of two Navy A7 Corsair planes over North Vietnam Sunday. Their pilots are missing. Radio Hanoi said in a broadcast monitored in Saigon that five American planes were shot down over North Vietnam Monday, but it made no mention of the fate of the crewmen.

Troops of the South Vietnamese 5th Airborne Battalion, which the official spokesman in Saigon said swept into the Citadel Tuesday, had been entrenched close to the southwestern corner of the fortress. A laser-guided "smart bomb" dropped by a U.S. plane had punched a hole in the wall at that point.

"Our airborne entered the citadel at Quang Tri at 10:20 today and we now control the city of Quang Tri," said Hien at his daily news briefing in Saigon. There was no opposition and no report of any casualties, he said.

Eagleton's associates not surprised by treatment

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI)—Missouri associates of Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton Tuesday remembered him as a hard-working attorney general who often pushed himself too hard but seldom showed the strain.

The stunning announcement by the Democratic vice presidential candidate that he had undergone psychiatric care three times in the past 12 years came as no surprise to his former co-workers. But, they said, they were surprised that anyone would consider Eagleton as having been ill.

"It never even occurred to me to think of him as ill, or anything of that nature, said Lou DeFeo, an assistant under Eagleton and now a lobbyist.

Two of the hospitalizations — in 1960 and 1966 —came after hard-fought election campaigns. Eagleton's associates said they were simply trips to recover from normal exhaustion.

"He was a hypertensive person who often worked himself to the point of physical exhaustion," said Jeremiah D. Finnegan, an assistant attorney general under Eagleton for two years. "When he got on a project, he put himself into it and used all of his resources to bring it to an end."

McDade lauds Cheney

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Rep. Joseph McDade, R-10th, praised Col. Robert A. Cheney, former commanding officer of the Tobyhanna Army Depot for the Army officer's role during the recent flooding as a result of Hurricane Agnes.

McDade lauded Cheney, who was transferred to another assignment on July 14 and who is soon to be promoted to the rank of brigadier general, for service and devotion "far beyond the call of duty."

The Congressman pointed out that within two hours the depot communications center, under the direction of Cheney, brought in a helicopter from New Cumberland Army Depot near Harrisburg to evacuate several persons from Catawissa.

McDade also pointed out that depot personnel distributed 100,000 sandbags to try to control the flood waters in Wilkes-Barre as well as aided in the establishment of temporary housing for approximately 2,000 of the first flood victims.

He said Cheney had served "with distinction" at the depot, and called the military installation an "outstanding" one under the leadership of the officer.

Milk crop sees slight decrease

HARRISBURG — The number of cows in Pennsylvania's dairy herds remained steady during June, but milk production dropped seven per cent from May and was two per cent off from a year earlier.

The Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service said the fall from a record 950 pounds per cow in May to 880 per cow in June was normal seasonal decline.

Total production for June was 610,000,000 pounds, about 70,000,000 gallons. This is down 15,000,000 pounds from June, 1971, but there was 9,000 more cows at that time.

The prices paid farmers in June was $6.45 per hundredweight higher than June, 1971.

U.S. milk production in June was over 11 billion pounds.

Regional medical system converted to corporation

AVOCA — A pioneering effort by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare to convert a disjointed medical system into a manageable corporation will be attempted in the eight-county area of Carbon, Lackawanna, Luzerne, Monroe, Pike, Sullivan, Wayne and Wyoming.

The purpose of the program is to scrap old programs and test new methods with anticipated lower costs to hospitals and consumers.

The formation of the new corporation, Health Care Management Corporation of N.E. Pennsylvania, has been announced by the Health and Hospital Planning Council of North East Pennsylvania, the region's comprehensive health planning agency.

The organization will be responsible for the development of an accessible, effective and quality oriented personal health delivery system in the eight-county region.

Lower medical costs are expected to be realized from the activities of the corporation.

HHPC has been the sponsoring agency for a separate federally funded project called the Experimental Health Services Delivery System which over the last year has developed and advanced the corporate approach as the answer to initiating, delivering and managing regional health care services.

With the creation of the corporation, the HEW experimental contract is expected to be relinquished by HHPC and turned over to the new organization.

The new corporation is comprised of 19 directors and 96 members. At a recent meeting, officers were elected and the organization's by-laws were ratified.

Dr. Leonard Wolf, nominee of the independent colleges of the region, was elected chairman of the new corporation.

Other officers are Gerald F. Malloy, vice chairman, nominee of the Luzerne County Home Health Services, and Sister William Joseph Lydon, RSM, secretary-treasurer nominee of Mercy Hospital, Scranton.

The concept of a regional corporate structure has received the endorsement of officials of the Regional Medical Program and Congressman Daniel J. Flood.

Basically the new organization will seek to establish relationships with health care professionals, consumers, public officials, third party payors, such as Blue Cross and with voluntary charitable funds to combine efforts.

In addition, the new group will conduct studies and evaluations which will provide a health profile of the region's population and coordinate efforts for a better delivery system.

The corporation's by-laws call for the "development of innovative programs to receive and allocate funds in such a manner as to insure the purpose of the corporation and to evaluate the effectiveness of both the programs and allocations."

Close cooperation will be sought with the research, demonstration and educational programs of the regional Medical Program.

The new unit will also be responsive to plans and priorities set by HHPC.

Area Boy Scout camps lauded after inspections

MOUNT POCONO — Boy Scout Camps Minsi and Trexler both received praise this week as two of the finest camps in the new Northeast Boy Scout Region. They are located in the Poconos.

The Minsi Trails Scout Council Executive Board received the compliment during the annual inspection of camping facilities at the Pioneer and Settlers Camps at Trexler and also Camp Minsi by two members of the Northeast Regional Committee.

Russ Thomas, of Laureldale, reported that the camping program at Camps Minsi and Trexler were "exceptional".

He singled out the "excellent" field-sports program which includes rifle, archery and skeet shooting, as well as the nature and ecology departments, and gave special commendation to the waterfront activities, which include boating, canoeing, swimming and life-saving instruction.

Thomas and Fred Howard also praised the camp administration of both camps for their excellent records concerning trading post operation, food purchase and distribution and camp business administration.

Thomas told the board that the Minsi Trails Council camps all qualify on the mandatory items required by the region for National Standard Camp Certification.

Included in the inspection was a tour of all the camp site facilities which are required to provide at least 30 square feet of floor space for each camper.

The sites are also provided with adequate washing and drinking water and toilet facilities.

The inspectors reviewed the camps' food service and dining facilities and termed them "adequate, clean and neat". Kitchen and food-handling personnel were complimented on their neatness and adherence to sanitary standards.

Safety features, including appropriate fire extinguishers, liquid fuels storage and motor vehicles were approved.

Special commendation was given to the ecology-conservation program which was placed in full operation this summer.

Put that raise up for vote

The General Assembly, bless its collective soul, wanted more than anything to not have to vote on those pay raises recommended by the State Compensation Commission . . . not in an election year, anyway.

Too bad. Gov. Milton Shapp has decided, mostly because he apparently caught reverberations from the general uproar over the proposed increases, to put the issue squarely before the legislature, using the obvious need for emergency flood relief legislation as an opening wedge.

It's a nice piece of trickery, since the legislators could hardly — again, in an election year — refuse to consider the plight of thousands of victims of the floods spawned by Tropical Storm Agnes.

That's all right, though. The legislature harbors quite a few tricky people itself. The entire pay raise gambit was one magnificent bit of fakery. According to the Pennsylvania Constitution, remember, legislators cannot vote on a pay increase to take effect while they are serving their current term.

The reason for that article is obvious: If a legislator knows he cannot benefit immediately from a pay raise, and if he thinks the electorate may be so upset by yet another hike as to vote him out should he cast his vote for an increase, he might just be a little more concerned with the wishes of the electorate than otherwise.

With the creation of the Compensation Commission, though, the legislature pulled a neat end run around that article. Recommendations of the commission, unless specifically voted on before 60 days elapse, automatically go into effect. And since the legislature made sure to adjourn before such a vote could be taken, and since the time limit would have expired before the Assembly would return to session, the pay raise was all but assured.

But then came the hue and cry from an aroused and angered citizenry. There followed requests from several legislators, including Rep. William Foster, R-139, who heard that protest, for a special session to vote on the increases.

Well, they have their wish. The question is, just how daring are our legislators? Or, to put it another way, what sort of deal did they make with Gov. Shapp in acceding to his request for a special session to act on flood legislation?

On that question rests the outcome of that pay raise vote. We aren't going to take any bets that the legislature will vote to throw out the commission's report entirely. Some sort of compromise is inevitable, the way it looks from here. A pay hike, but not too much of a pay hike, will no doubt be voted.

We can only thank the stars that this whole pay business came along in an election year of this magnitude, or we for sure would have been stuck with the entire increase, which is an insult to the taxpayers who are barred from such magnificent increase by Presidential fiat.

(The Internal Revenue Service may have the last word yet, though. There is every indication a substantial increase will draw heavy fire from Washington. We would rather count on the fire from the voters, though. They have the most at stake and the best weapon — the ballot.)

Power need critical

If you could have found a spot from which to listen to the Poconos over the last few days, chances are you would have heard little but the splash of people jumping into the water and the hum of air conditioners.

White water for jumping is available to most of us, for one reason or another, many people don't particularly care to take the plunge. For them, it's air conditioners.

The same is true, and more so, for millions of people in urban areas, but the hot spell hasn't allowed them a respite. There just wasn't enough power to run those air conditioners.

Now, suffering through a hot spell won't kill anyone, will it? Right? Wrong. Several deaths in urban areas, and quite a few in the Poconos, are attributable directly or indirectly to the current heat wave. And the same power shortages are probable in the winter, and prolonged, unrelieved cold can kill, too.

And yet we have ultra-environmentalists screaming that additional power plants will demean the environment and ruin the ecology and they shouldn't be built.

To them we say that power is essential. Unless, of course, they want to burn all the trees in the forest to keep warm, or stand up to our necks in every available pond and stream to keep cool.

Properly planned power systems will do less harm to the environment than these eco-freaks care to admit. But inadequate power systems will do more harm to people than a slightly tarnished environment will, because there are more of us now, and we cannot just wander off into a cool glade for relief from the summer sun.

The Pennsylvania Story

Guard at 'war'

(Second Of Three Parts)

HARRISBURG — On that fateful day of June 22 when Tropical Storm Agnes first began to really flex her water muscles, no one could remotely envision the massive "war" the Keystone State was destined to wage as destruction rained for the skies.

It will be recalled that by 7:30 a.m. on that overcast day in June, Gov. Milton J. Shapp had given Brigadier General Harry J. Mier, commander of the Pennsylvania National Guard, speedy authority to "use Guardsmen wherever the need existed."

Importantly, all major Pennsylvania National Guard commanders were given carte blanche authority to place units on active duty — and amazingly, by the end of that first fateful day 2,278 Pennsylvania National Guardsmen were on duty throughout the state.

By the time the peak had been reached some 10,000 of Pennsylvania's Army National Guardsmen would be on duty — roughly 60 per cent of the total complement in the state.

Different view

In virtually every flood stricken area where Guardsmen were deployed local residents began taking a different view of the Guard as the men "turned to" ruggedly in their new role not as soldiers fighting a shooting war — but fighting the peacetime enemy of the ravaging flood water of Tropical Storm Agnes.

As the hours and then the days wore on with the flood waters of Agnes leveling unprecedented fury and destruction the role of the Guardsmen became vivid to the thousands of sufferers, the homeless, the evacuated, the hungry, the medically needy — you name it.

The unquestionably heroic story of these men probably never can or will be told in full detail as they evacuated people by boat, helicopter, in jeeps, armored personnel carriers, on piggy-back, by rope — by every conceivable means.

Guardsmen hauled cots, blankets, etc., to areas for use by evacuees; they loaned and operated generators for emergency power at hospitals and municipal buildings, established evacuation centers in armories including feeding of evacuees until the Red Cross could take over.

Pennsylvania's Guardsmen established anti-looting and security patrols, provided medical support, operated water purification units, assisted in traffic control during and after flood waters started to subside, operated engineering equipment in cleaning up debris, established and operated land fills for debris removal — again, you name it and Guardsmen were in there with a grim determination that caught many unit commanders by surprise and with unlimited admiration for their men.

Story repeated

The story seems to have been carried out, or repeated, in one flood area after another, Lock Haven, Williamsport, Harrisburg, Norristown, Wilkes-Barre — Wilkes-Barre?

That's a story in itself and certainly can be used for illustrative purposes!

Wilkes-Barre and surrounding areas were the hardest hit in the state, the most devastated — almost, in a sense, wiped off the map. Few grasp the devastation; there's a saying: "You can't believe it until you see it."

We helicoptered to Wilkes-Barre and spent the day there and even at "Agnes-plus-One" — a month later — it's still difficult to believe until you see it.

Wilkes-Barre is pulling itself up by its soggy bootstraps, but a long haul lies ahead.

National Guardsmen are still on duty — and probably will be until the latter part of August. It's "griding" duty now for the men, a decided change from their harrowing and heroic efforts of only a few weeks ago which produced an amazing citizen display of admiration, gratitude and outright respect (once again?) for the men in olive drab uniform!

The story on that in this column tomorrow...

Quota convention

A good chance exists that the Democratic National Convention will be remembered less for its nomination of George McGovern than for its explicit indorsement of the quota system as a device for "representation" — of blacks, Chicanos, Indians, women, and youth. For by their selection of this device the Democrats signified their approval of something utterly novel, indeed revolutionary, in American life.

The quota system has only begun to be applied in the society at large. In employment, it has its roots in Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which prohibits discriminatory employment not only in tax-supported enterprises but also in those enjoying contracts with the Federal Government.

'Affirmative action'

As a result of various Federal rulings, the negative provision against discrimination has tended to give way to the doctrine of "affirmative action." Thus, HEW has recently been trying to combat "racism" and "sexism" in private colleges and universities by requiring those institutions to provide "representation" on their faculties and staffs to blacks, women, and so on.

Since there are fewer black, female, and Indian PH.Ds in most fields than white male Ph.D.s, the result has been intense competition for the minority Ph.D.s. Thus the minority candidate can get a much higher salary with lower qualifications than his white counterpart.

The quota system is beginning to work the same way in college admissions, too. You have a much better chance of getting into Harvard or Princeton now if you are a black or a Chicano with a B average than if you are a white with a B average. With one eye on the ethnicized future, they are now telling the following joke at faculty cocktail parties: "Her sister could not enroll as an economics major because the Polish quota was filled; she is now trying to get into home economics as a Lesbian."

What the quota system — so vividly reflected in Miami Beach and in these academic initiatives — would signify is the establishment of racial and ethnic quotas in wide sectors of the labor market and in the professions, with, necessarily, the enforcement of the quotas by the Federal bureaucracy.

How large a departure this will be from the traditional American pattern may instantly be grasped. Traditionally the law has been neutral, color blind, not a respecter of persons.

The imposition of quotas on the public realm necessarily involves a complete break with the traditional pattern. It will be well to recognize this fact, and some of the consequences.

Our vantage point

In retrospect

By Bert Walter

From our vantage point — the Pocono International Raceway is only some three miles from our home down Long Pond Road — we have come to the conclusion that only two things were drastically wrong with the July 8 Concert 10 rock festival: garbage and traffic.

Without a doubt, the great majority of concert goers were slobs. They completely disregarded their ecological banner of a beautiful earth.

We thought at first that there had not been enough refuse receptacles at the raceway, but there had been thousands. Therefore, there is no other explanation except that these people were slobs — or, perhaps, were a vestige of the older generation which still dumps full ashtrays out of car windows while riding on Interstate Route 80, pitches melon peels from its car windows; empties cartons of refuse outside its cars at drive-ins and a host of other things.

With 200,000 persons, however, it was much more obvious than just 50 motorists in a drive-in ditching their soda or popcorn containers.

Traffic another matter

The traffic is another matter altogether and this problem has been the center of controversy and antagonism against the festival and any other such festival in the future.

But let's analyze this traffic situation.

We left our home at Emerald Lakes at 10 p.m. July 6 and drove down to the raceway. Some 5,000 persons were already there, camped everywhere around the raceway where they were able to find a little niche in the woods to park their cars and light a campfire to take the chill out of the evening.

Three raceway security guards were on duty. They were only concerned with maintaining security inside the raceway and not out.

The following afternoon, some 30,000 persons had already trickled into the area. Two security officials each were at the Long Pond Road and Route 115 entrance to the parking area.

The security officials, however, were only concerned with the traffic "flow" and not with an organized parking effort. There were no parking lot attendants. The cars channeled into the mammoth parking area parked perpendicular to each other, in circles and in other jig-saw formations with some of the occupants immediately setting up housekeeping by their cars.

At midnight Friday, the mess was here. Traffic along Long Pond Road moved along slower than snail's pace. Horns honked throughout the evening and the traffic remained as such — at a virtual standstill — until Sunday.

Even at midnight Friday, there was no effective control to get these cars into the parking area which was expansive enough to accommodate most, if not all of them.

Control inadequate

We maintain the clogged traffic situation began Thursday night and, due to inadequate control for having these cars parked, the congestion moved from the parking lot entrance gates outward to all roads leading to the raceway.

We cannot fault the festival goers as much as we can the concert principles.

The Pocono Township Vol. Fire Co. did a better job of traffic control during their carnival last week in Tannersville by funnelling all the cars into their parking area than did the raceway — and the firemen had more traffic controllers than did the raceway on Thursday and Friday nights when the problem started.

It's just a shame that on Saturday — when everyone realized what had happened — it was too late.

Honest men who lie

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — In the oak-paneled world of ambassadors, there's an old saying that a diplomat is an honest man sent out to lie for his country.

This has been the unhappy role of our envoy to Paraguay, J. Raymond Ylitalo, who has represented President Nixon in the autocratic court of dictator Alfredo Stroessner since 1969.

Indeed, the rivet-eyed Stroessner is fond of saying that the American ambassador is like a member of his cabinet.

When we revealed that Stroessner's epauletted generals and admirals were hustling heroin, therefore, Ylitalo sprang to the defense of the military dictatorship. "Slanderous!" he called our story.

"As the American ambassador in Paraguay," he proclaimed, "I consider it my duty in good conscience to refute the unfounded accusations ... by Mr. Anderson."

Stroessner promptly ordered his embassies around the world to issue press releases quoting Ylitalo. The dictator also had his foreign minister, Raul Sapena Pastor, send a private message to Secretary of State Bill Rogers demanding that he denounce us in public.

But this was carrying diplomacy a little too far for Rogers, who sent Pastor a polite note saying he personally didn't have any hard evidence on the charges.

It's classified

Rogers didn't mention that he had some classified cables from Ylitalo's own embassy in Paraguay, refuting what Ylitalo had said in public. On at least four occasions between June 16 and June 20, the embassy secretly supported our stories.

Ylitalo happened to be on home leave at the time. But back in Paraguay, his staff fired off reports telling how Stroessner had refused to cooperate to end the heroin trade.

"The time has come to give a clear signal," began one classified cable. It went on to describe Paraguay's do-nothing posture on drugs.

Other cables suggested that the United States should warn Paraguay of aid cuts unless the dictatorship helped to crack down on the drug traffic. 'Marked improvement" was needed, declared the embassy.

Stroessner had let the U.S. down by refusing to adopt strong new laws to control drugs and failing to adhere to the 1961 narcotics convention protocol.

Paraguay has also dawdled about handing over the notorious French narcotics kingpin, Auguste Ricord, who is living comfortably in a Paraguayan jail while the United States pleads with Stroessner to extradite him. On this count, too, the embassy urged tough action by Washington.

Food scandal

The mismanagement of the military commissary system has become so bad that even House Armed Services Chairman Eddie Hebert, D-La., the Dutch Uncle of the Defense Department, is upset about it.

Herbert has quietly written to outgoing Army Chief William Westmoreland complaining about "commissary personnel, both in and out of uniform, belonging to an organization whose members are doing business with commissaries."

The chairman, of course, was talking about the Defense Supply Association, a well-heeled lobby whose membership includes both food brokers and the Pentagon officials to whom they sell their goods.

"This sort of arrangement," said Herbert, "has the potential for restraint of trade which will result in higher prices for military personnel, kickbacks and conflict of interest."

Herbert asked Westmoreland to give the commissary mess his "personal attention."

It needs it. The $2.5 billion a year commissary system is the biggest and worst-managed supermarket chain on earth.

It is supposed to provide food and other basic goods to military families at low cost. But all too often, the commissary officers have given the best deal to the food brokers who have, in turn, provided them with such emoluments as Paris playgirls and plush hotel rooms.

When we first revealed these shenanigans early last year, we found that the four top logistics officers in the Pentagon had winked at the improprieties because they were also involved with the food lobby as "honorary presidents" of the Defense Supply Association.

Subsequently, they have resigned, and the association has changed its name to the American Logistics Association.

Yet we have found that the brass hats and the lobbyists are still playing buddy-buddy. At the Masters Golf Tournament in Augusta, two commissary officers, Forrest Gorr and Vance Rimmer, were spotted living it up with two bigtime food brokers, Russ Friend and Charley Reed.

Gorr has also gone to the races with such other food brokers as Si Abzug and Mack Palmer. Both Gorr and Rimmer insist they always pay their own bills when they travel with food brokers.

Whether they do or not, such cozy friendships have led the disastrous mismanagment of the commissary system. A recent GAO study, for example, showed that European commissaries had bought an 81-year supply of Kellogg's tuna fish salad and a 28-year supply of crabmeat salad.

This blunder has led to the tuna fish being unloaded on Army mess halls in Europe in hopes it can be consumed before it all spoils.

Stories Behind Words

By William Penfield

Gossip

The early English called a godparent — a sponsor at baptism — a "godsibb." The word was composed of "God" plus "sibb," which in Anglo-Saxon meant "related" or "kin".

The god parents usually were distant relatives of the child they sponsored. But whether they were or not, the godsibbs felt a special kinship to each other through their joint sponsorship of the child.

The godsibbs, being close friends, exchanged observations and opinions of persons and things; hence godsibb acquired the meaning of a newsmonger, or a bearer of idle tales. Through slurred pronunciation godsibb has come down to us as "gossip."

Canvass

"Canvas" (a coarse cloth) and "canvass" (to examine carefully) originated from the Latin word "cannabis" (hemp).

Cannabis became "canevas" in Old North French and "canvas" in English. The fact that the coarse cloth was first made from hemp accounts from its name. In time the name "canvas" was applied to similar cloth made from flax, jute or cotton.

Canvas was, and still is, made of different thicknesses, weights and sizes of mesh, depending upon its intended usage. One particular grade was used as a bolting or sifting cloth in flour mills. The use of canvas gave us the word "canvass," meaning to sift or examine carefully. The second "s" was added to distinguish the new meaning from the name of the cloth.

Put that raise up for vote

The General Assembly, bless its collective soul, wanted more than anything to not have to vote on those pay raises recommended by the State Compensation Commission . . . not in an election year, anyway.

Too bad. Gov. Milton Shapp has decided, mostly because he apparently caught reverberations from the general uproar over the proposed increases, to put the issue squarely before the legislature, using the obvious need for emergency flood relief legislation as an opening wedge.

It's a nice piece of trickery, since the legislators could hardly — again, in an election year — refuse to consider the plight of thousands of victims of the floods spawned by Tropical Storm Agnes.

That's all right, though. The legislature harbors quite a few tricky people itself. The entire pay raise gambit was one magnificent bit of fakery. According to the Pennsylvania Constitution, remember, legislators cannot vote on a pay increase to take effect while they are serving their current term.

The reason for that article is obvious: If a legislator knows he cannot benefit immediately from a pay raise, and if he thinks the electorate may be so upset by yet another hike as to vote him out should he cast his vote for an increase, he might just be a little more concerned with the wishes of the electorate than otherwise.

With the creation of the Compensation Commission, though, the legislature pulled a neat end run around that article. Recommendations of the commission, unless specifically voted on before 60 days elapse, automatically go into effect. And since the legislature made sure to adjourn before such a vote could be taken, and since the time limit would have expired before the Assembly would return to session, the pay raise was all but assured.

But then came the hue and cry from an aroused and angered citizenry. There followed requests from several legislators, including Rep. William Foster, R-139, who heard that protest, for a special session to vote on the increases.

Well, they have their wish. The question is, just how daring are our legislators? Or, to put it another way, what sort of deal did they make with Gov. Shapp in acceding to his request for a special session to act on flood legislation?

On that question rests the outcome of that pay raise vote. We aren't going to take any bets that the legislature will vote to throw out the commission's report entirely. Some sort of compromise is inevitable, the way it looks from here. A pay hike, but not too much of a pay hike, will no doubt be voted.

We can only thank the stars that this whole pay business came along in an election year of this magnitude, or we for sure would have been stuck with the entire increase, which is an insult to the taxpayers who are barred from such magnificent increase by Presidential fiat.

(The Internal Revenue Service may have the last word yet, though. There is every indication a substantial increase will draw heavy fire from Washington. We would rather count on the fire from the voters, though. They have the most at stake and the best weapon — the ballot.)

Power need critical

If you could have found a spot from which to listen to the Poconos over the last few days, chances are you would have heard little but the splash of people jumping into the water and the hum of air conditioners.

White water for jumping is available to most of us, for one reason or another, many people don't particularly care to take the plunge. For them, it's air conditioners.

The same is true, and more so, for millions of people in urban areas, but the hot spell hasn't allowed them a respite. There just wasn't enough power to run those air conditioners.

Now, suffering through a hot spell won't kill anyone, will it? Right? Wrong. Several deaths in urban areas, and quite a few in the Poconos, are attributable directly or indirectly to the current heat wave. And the same power shortages are probable in the winter, and prolonged, unrelieved cold can kill, too.

And yet we have ultra-environmentalists screaming that additional power plants will demean the environment and ruin the ecology and they shouldn't be built.

To them we say that power is essential. Unless, of course, they want to burn all the trees in the forest to keep warm, or stand up to our necks in every available pond and stream to keep cool.

Properly planned power systems will do less harm to the environment than these eco-freaks care to admit. But inadequate power systems will do more harm to people than a slightly tarnished environment will, because there are more of us now, and we cannot just wander off into a cool glade for relief from the summer sun.

Guard at 'war'

(Second Of Three Parts)

HARRISBURG — On that fateful day of June 22 when Tropical Storm Agnes first began to really flex her water muscles, no one could remotely envision the massive "war" the Keystone State was destined to wage as destruction rained for the skies.

It will be racalled that by 7:30 a.m. on that overcast day in June, Gov. Milton J. Shapp had given Brigadier General Harry J. Mier, commander of the Pennsylvania National Guard, speedy authority to "use Guardsmen wherever the need existed."

Importantly, all major Pennsylvania National Guard commanders were given carte blanche authority to place units on active duty — and amazingly, by the end of that first fateful day 2,278 Pennsylvania National Guardsmen were on duty throughout the state.

By the time the peak had been reached some 10,000 of Pennsylvania's Army National Guardsmen would be on duty — roughly 60 per cent of the total complement in the state.

Different view

In virtually every flood stricken area where Guardsmen were deployed local residents began taking a different view of the Guard as the men "turned to" ruggedly in their new role not as soldiers fighting a shooting war — but fighting the peacetime enemy of the ravaging flood water of Tropical Storm Agnes.

Honest men who lie

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — In the oak-paneled world of ambassadors, there's an old saying that a diplomat is an honest man sent out to lie for his country.

Canvass

"Canvas" (a coarse cloth) and "canvass" (to examine carefully) originated from the Latin word "cannabis" (hemp).

Cannabis became "canevas" in Old North French and "canvas" in English. The fact that the coarse cloth was first made from hemp accounts from its name. In time the name "canvas" was applied to similar cloth made from flax, jute or cotton.

Canvas was, and still is, made of different thicknesses, weights and sizes of mesh, depending upon its intended usage. One particular grade was used as a bolting or sifting cloth in flour mills. The use of canvas gave us the word "canvass," meaning to sift or examine carefully. The second "s" was added to distinguish the new meaning from the name of the cloth.

Mayors support revenue sharing

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Sixteen Democratic and Republican mayors endorsed federal revenue sharing Tuesday as a vital antidote to "well-meaning policies of the federal government" which had helped drive cities to the brink of fiscal chaos.

The mayors and other local government officials pledged to support revenue sharing "wholeheartedly and in unity" during a 45-minute White House meeting with President Nixon and in later testimony before the Senate Finance Committee, said Atlanta Mayor Sam Massell.

Massell, president of the National League of Cities, said Nixon agreed that the program was "nonpartisan and nonpolitical" and could not be passed without strong Democratic support.

Mayor Louie Welch of Houston, Tex., president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors and a Democrat like Massell, praised Nixon for bringing the revenue sharing bill to the point "we believe it will be passed before Labor Day."4

The Senate committee is considering a House-passed bill that would return to states and localities an estimated $30 billion in federal tax revenue in the next five years, retroactive to Jan. 1. About half the money would have no strings attached, and the rest would have to be spent in several broad categories, excluding education.

Nixon has proposed a much-similar program, carrying $5.3 billion in the first year. Mrs. Gladys Spellman of Prince Georges County, Md., president of the National Association of Counties, said the mayors could "live with" the House version drafted by Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark.

Woolworth heir dies in crash

ASPEN, Colo. (UPI)—Lance Reventlow, born with a million dollar silver spoon from a five and ten cent store, died in the crash of a private plane in the Colorado Rockies, authorities disclosed Tuesday.

Reventlow, 36, was killed Monday along with three other persons in the crash of the four-seater plane. The other three were pilot Gifford Hooker and passengers Barbara Baker and Bob Wulf, all part time Aspen residents.

Reventlow, son of Woolworth heiress Barbara Hutton and the former husband of actress Jill St. John, was surveying some land he wanted to buy. The plane crashed during a heavy thunderstorm 17 miles north of this ski resort and eight miles from the nearest road.

Sheriff Carol Whitmire said the wreckage of Reventlow's plane was spotted by another airplane. A rescue crew reached the wreckage Monday night and confirmed all four persons were dead.

Reventlow, born Feb. 24, 1936, was the son of Miss Hutton and Danish Count Kurt VonHaugwitz-Reventlow.

Reventlow, the world's richest baby at his birth, was also the most closely guarded infant in the world. An elaborate alarm system was designed and installed to protect the great grandson of F.W. Woolworth.

"So you were born with brown eyes and I with money," he would tell friends. "It just makes life more convenient."

Miss Hutton is still regarded as the world's richest woman.

Johnson's condition 'satisfactory'

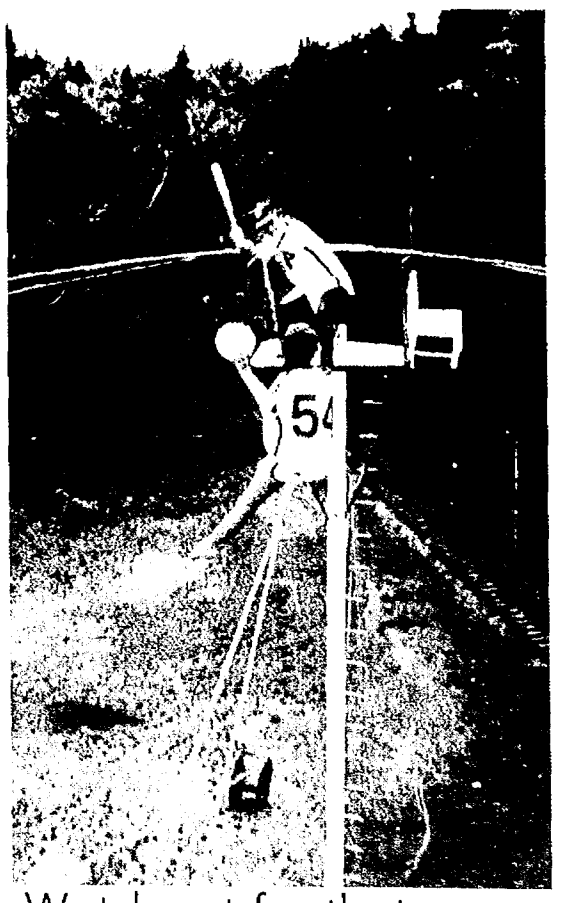

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI)—Former President Lyndon B. Johnson, hospitalized with chest pain and nausea, was in high spirits and "quite satisfactory" condition, his doctors said Tuesday.

Physicians said there was no indication the nation's 31th chief executive had suffered another heart attack.

"It may be several days before any definite conclusions can be drawn about the nature of his present illness," a Brooke Army Hospital bulletin said. "...he was comfortable, in excellent spirits and his general condition is quite satisfactory.

"There have been no irregularities in the heart rhythm or blood pressure."

Doctors said Johnson, 63, was scheduled to enter the hospital Tuesday for routine tests, but was flown Monday night in a small airplane from his Stonewall, Tex., ranch 80 miles to the Army hospital after suffering the chest pain and nausea.

Unused land now 144 parks

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A program to turn unused federal land over to local governments resulted in the creation of 144 new parks in 39 states in the past two years, President Nixon said Tuesday.

This has reversed the trend "toward government so big it loses touch with its citizens," he added.

Nixon made his remarks at a meeting with members of his federal Property Review Board, which he established in 1970 with a goal of properly utilizing public lands.

Since then, the board reported, 20,400 acres of federal land valued at about $100 million has been turned over to state and local governments for use as parks. Nixon said he would like to see every state benefit from the program.

"Government agencies seem to get a vested interest in every piece of land they have and they fight against turning it over," he told the board. "The bureaucracy has gotten so used to just sitting on this property...that they fight and twist and turn every time we try to get a better use..."

But the President added that the board should follow through and make sure local governments receiving federal property put it to good use. If they do not, he said, the federal government should reclaim it.

"The federal public lands belong to all Americans and are part of the heritage and birthrights of every citizen. They are the breathing space of every nation and it is essential that they be preserved for future generations," he said.

The federal government is by far the largest landowner in the country, claiming 760 million acres.

Needless operations may exceed 2 million

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Insurance Commissioner Herbert Denenberg said Tuesday his estimate of 2 million unnecessary operations in the United States each year may be on the conservative side.

Denenberg made the estimate last week when he released the "Shopper's Guide to Surgery" which listed 14 rules for consumers to follow in choosing a surgeon.

Denenberg said an article in the National Oberver cited estimates in the 3-to4-million range.

"As Blue Shield gathers more facts on surgery and starts doing its job," he said, "we will be able to generate more reliable estimates of unnecessary surgery."

"These are likely to be much higher than our original estimates," Denenberg said.

The guide is the fourth one published by the Insurance Department. It was preceded by guides to buying auto insurance, life insurance and choosing hospitals.

Dr. Thomas T. Smith, president of the Douglas-Sarpy County, Neb., Medical Society, said in response to the guide that "unnecessary surgery in not being carried out in this area."

Dr. Smith said each hospital in his area has an "all-powerful review committee to prevent possible deviation from the standard practice of medicine."

"There may be some argument over the exact amount of unnecessary surgery," Denenberg said, "but no responsible medical authority or study has ever claimed that some unnecessary surgery does not take place."

"These all - powerful review committees are neither all-powerful nor effective," he said.

89,000 families given 'tangible' welfare aid

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Public Welfare Secretary Helene Wohlgemuth has reported that her department provided "tangible services" last year to 89,000 public assistance families with dependent children.

"Social services enable many persons to remain in the community instead of going into costly and dehumanizing institutions," Mrs. Wohlgemuth said.

"Our plans call for an expansion of services already in force," she said, "plus a broad program for purchasing services from other public and private sources."

The department said, in a report to the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, 33 day care center contracts totaling $41.3 million were let to provide supervision for 15,000 children.

The department reported initiating 18 legal aid contracts and 10 contracts to provide social services residing in public housing.

The department also reported over 10,000 persons employed in special work projects and 1,719 adults enrolled in special career development programs.

Financial planning services were provided to 4,648 families and medical und dental services were provided for 65,985, the department said.

Approximately 9,300 children received counseling and protective care purchased through county child welfare agencies each month.

The department said 29,533 families received social, medical and educational planning services through the department's medical assistance program and 1,765 families, were given homemaker services.

Catholic homes searched by soldiers for weapons

BELFAST (UPI) — British troops pressing a new "get tough" policy entered the Irish Republican Army (IRA) Provisionals' blockaded stronghold in Londonderry Tuesday and swept Belfast Roman Catholic districts for weapons.

The man who ordered the policy, Secretary of State William Whitelaw, met with politicians of all shades of opinion to attempt to organize an all-party conference on the province's future.

The army said a patrol found the body of a man, later identified as a Protestant, shot in the head on Roden Street in West Belfast. Residents of the mainly Protestant area said he had been shot by gunmen firing from the nearby Roman Catholic Lower Falls area.

He was the fourth person to die in the past 24 hours, raising Northern Ireland's death toll in the past three years to 473. There have been 61 deaths since the IRA cease-fire ended July 9.

An army announcement said patrols Tuesday entered the Londonderry "no go" Creggan area, the main stronghold of the Provisionals in the city, as well as the adjacent Bogside district. The army Monday said patrols had entered the Bogside in force during the weekend for the first time in nearly a year.

No details were given of Tuesday's operations other than that no trouble was encountered.

A security source said entrance into the Creggan was significant because it was the Provisionals' main territory.

Political sources Tuesday said Britain has secretly sent armored tank supporters with bulldozer blades to the province in what could be a prelude to a full-scale invasion of the Creggan and the Bogside.

Soldiers found rifles, pistols, small arms ammunition, bayonets and knives in Belfast's Turf Lodge area. Sixteen persons were detained throughout the city and turned over to police for questioning.

Troops removed barricades from the Ardoyne, Divis Flats and the New Lodge areas. They met no resistance. But a land mine booby-trapping a barricade in the Celtic Park district blew up while it was being removed. No one was hurt.

Taxpayer wins partial victory against CIA

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A Greensburg, Pa., taxpayer has won a partial court victory in his efforts to obtain a disclosure of Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) expenditures.

The U. S. Third Circuit Court of Appeals in a 6-3 decision vacated a Pittsburgh federal court dismissal of the complaint of William B. Richardson, who describes himself as a "citizen, voter and taxpayer."

The appellate judges ordered the case remanded to the lower court where Richardson's application for a three-judge court was denied on Jan. 16, 1970, in an opinion by Judge Max Rosenn.

It was concluded the complaint "presents a constitutional cause of action raising a substantial question which required convening a three-judge court."

On remand, the district judge will take appropriate steps to request the chief judge of this court to designate a statutory three-judge court," the opinion added.

"All remaining issues not resolved in this opinion shall be adjudicated by the court so convened."

Rosenn noted that Richardson sought an accounting of funds received and spent by the CIA on grounds it was not contained in the government's consolidated statement of receipts, expenditures and balances.

Easy to make

French fashion designer Jacques Esterel, saying that only those who wear perfect sizes can squeeze into factory-made clothes, opened the 1972-73 fall winter shows in Paris at the stroke of midnight with allegedly easy-to-make styles for girls with little dressmakers or sewing machines at home. The geometrically shaped dresses are buttoned on the side and elegant, bringing haute couture out of the salons and into the home sewing room.

Natural cosmetics offered ecology-minded women

By STANLEY H. SLOM
Dow Jones — Ottaway News

The woman who feeds her family organically grown foods, recycles her soft-drink bottles and keeps phosphates out of her washing machine has a few questions about a related matter:

How in good conscience can she walk out of the house in the morning knowing that she has just bathed her body in cosmetics that are saturated with chemicals?

And when she's finished with those cosmetics, what's she supposed to do with the non-biodegradable containers they came in? Throw them in the trash and let them become part of the rubbish despoiling a river bank somewhere?

Well, here's how she can do: she can wash her face in raw eggs and beer. Or condition her skin with strawberries. Or rub it with avocado or cantaloupe. Or pat it with cucumber or celery juice.

Or take a bath in a herb tea.

Indeed, there are any number of things she can do for skin with fruits and vegetables and other natural ingredients, and when she's finished she can take the container back to the store for a refill.

For the ecology movement has touched the cosmetics business.

So far, it isn't much more than a touch because most of the $6 billion-a-year industry goes on as before, turning out a profusion of creams, lotions and ointments rich in isopropyl ester of lanolin, ozokerite, vegetable oil triglyceride and other chemical ingredients too secret to mention or too hard to spell. They come in a wide variety of pretty glass and plastic containers that are easy enough to throw away but difficult for sanitation men to destroy.

But at least one established firm, Bonne Bell Inc. of Cleveland and one new company, Apothecare Inc. of New York, have taken the ecology movement seriously enough (or seen enough profit in it) to prepare lines of cosmetics that no woman need be embarrassed to wear even on Earth Day.

The use of natural ingredients has at least the indirect support of the Food and Drug Administration, which has taken an increasingly critical look at the chemicals that men, women and children routinely put on their faces and bodies.

In January, the FDA proposed sweeping regulations to limit the public's exposure to hexachlorophene and other germ-killing agents found in cleansers, soaps and cosmetics.

But most of the pressure for change comes not from the government nor from the industry but from women themselves, particularly from young, well-educated and resolute women who have been "sensitized" to environmental issues.

"We realized several years ago that ecology-minded people, especially young ones, were becoming disenchanted with cosmetics," says Jess Bell, the president of Bonne Bell. "Some wanted no cosmetics at all."

And so the 45-year-old cosmetics company, which has annual sales of about $40 million, decided to create a line of beauty creams based on avocado, cucumber, strawberry, celery, and other fruits and vegetables.

Bonne Bell's initial experiments were a failure. As a concession to its ecology-minded customers, the company didn't use any preservatives; the resulting products were less than satisfactory. But the company then developed a mix-it-yourself system that requires just a modicum of preservatives. The lotion is mixed with ground fruits or vegetables by the user.

There are skeptics who say the new cosmetics are more a result of crass commercialism than environmental concern, but whatever the impetus the cosmetics seem to be paying off.

MOUNTAINHOME — Two talks of special interest in the Mountainhome-Buck Hill area have been arranged for this week and next, and will feature flower arranging by an expert who is known internationally as an authority on the subject.

Miss Audrey Jocelyn of New York City will present the two programs, one for the benefit of the Mountainhome United Methodist Church and the other for the benefit of the Buck Hill Art Association.

The first program is set for July 30 at the church at 8 p.m., and will present "Floral Arrangements with Plants from the Bible." Only materials used during Biblical times will be utilized in the arrangements. An offering will be taken and will be presented to the church.

The program at Buck Hill Inn and Golf Club, Buck Hill Falls, will take place at 8:30 p.m. on Aug. 4 at the Inn, and will be concerned with "Floral Arrangements As An Art Form." Tickets will be available at the door, with proceeds going to the Art association. There will be a film on Japanese Gardens accompanying the talk.

The study of art brought Miss Jocelyn to New York at an early age. She first studied at the Art Students League, and then with private teachers, later studying in Italy and France for two years. Her work in art led her into the field of interior design, and during this period, she became interested in the art of flower arranging, finding in this medium the fullest expression of her knowledge and love of nature.

Miss Audrey Jocelyn

She opened the Flower Arrangers Shop and the Flower Arrangers School, which she heads, in New York. She specializes in Japanese arrangements, concentrating on the Sogetsu School because of her admiration for the artistry of its founder and headmaster, Sofu Teshigahara, a great artist and sculptor.

An artist, teacher, lecturer and writer, Audrey Jocelyn has established herself as an authority in both Western and Japanese flower arranging. She believes that flower arranging should be more than merely a skillful manipulation of flowers, repeating that which has been done many times before, and approaches it as a creative art form to be combined with other arts, using, besides natural materials, those which are man-made and expressive of the times in which we live.

When the girls from York came breezing into town for their two day golf safari at Glen Brook and Shawnee they brought the breeze and lighter air with them, much to the relief of their hosts.

It's been nine years or so that they've been hiring themselves a bus and making like Girl Scouts on an overnight. Over that period of time, a lot of friendships have grown deeper and there was a lot of news to catch up on about new grandchildren and new marriages and such.

There've been some changes at Glen Brook, too, just since last Thursday. Right in the middle of Ladies' day, the pro Joe Stencik want over to the hospital to welcome a brand new son.

There've been some changes in the editorial offices, too, with new desks for everybody. It makes for a much tidier look with all the desks the same color and the same height, but it does take away that look of indivuality.

I don't remember how long I've had my desk. I know it was before we moved over from Seventh St. because I remember only too well the trauma of moving day when, with our desk drawers taped shut, we moved our century of accumulated notes.

I untaped mine to discover they'd all vanished and after panci and fireworks discovered them deep in the recesses of the old monster. Some of them were still there: the flood editions and the "Get-Acquainted" special when everybody had cartoons instead of pictures.

And—well, someday maybe I'll see just what else is in that mess I transferred on mass into the deep drawer in the new desk. Somewhere in this efficient looking, bare-topped gleaming new journalism there should be a rats nest of memories.

The Slim Gourmet

By BARBARA GIBBONS

No crash diet

Dear Slim Gourmet: I'm a 16-year-old who weighs 100 pounds. I used to weigh 130, so I'm constantly watching my weight.

I love cheese but I can't eat very much of it at 105 calories an ounce. Recently I ran across a diet book that says you can eat all the cheese you want, plus cream, tuna in oil, mayonnaise, butter, eggs — and still lose weight. You can have all the meat you want whenever you're hungry. However, fruit, vegetables and bread are limited. You have to stay between 40 and 60 grams of carbohydrate a day.

This book claims carbohydrates make a person fat, not calories. Is this true? How can someone eat food that is high in fat and still lose weight. How do both types of diets contradict each other and still work? Is carbohydrate-counting better than calorie-counting? Would I benefit from this type of dieting?

Barbara Nickel
Roosevelt, N.J.

Dear Barbara: I sure hope I can talk you out of trying to maintain 100 pounds on a lifelong low-carbohydrate diet! A permanent diet that's high in fats, meats and dairy products and low in fresh fruits and vegetables? That's unhealthy for anyone of any age, but particularly a teen.

High protein crash diets, such as the one you're speaking of, aren't new. They were originally designed as an all-out last ditch reduction effort for the seriously obese, a short range project under the direction of a physician. It's a sure bet your family doctor would turn thumbs-down on it as a permanent means for you to stay at 100 pounds.

In fact, most doctors don't even like the high-protein, high-fat low-carbohydrate diets even for short range — because they don't work. Most dieters lose patience and interest long before they lose very many pounds, and they invariably gain back everything they've lost, plus some. Many experts claim that these diets, like all fad diets are actually low-calorie diets: you get so fed up with meat, eggs and cheese that you consume fewer calories. Hence the weight loss. Temporarily.

In addition to being boring and ineffective, such diets are downright dangerous for many. The lack of fresh fruits and vegetables can lead to vitamin deficiencies, especially in teen-agers. The assault of protein can be hazardous to someone with an unsuspected kidney ailment. And all that animal fat is hardly what the doctor ordered for an overweight — particularly a man with an undiagnosed cholesterol problem.

The best diet for you — or anybody — is one that keeps you at the weight you want to be, and healthy. In other words, a balanced diet made up of not one more calorie than you need to be slim. Your doctor, armed with weight charts and calorie guides, can help you decide what that should be.

Models, actresses, airline stewardesses and others who have to maintain their weight at a slim level — and their groovy, healthy good looks — know that they rarely have anything left over in their calorie budget for sweets and greasy kid stuff, so they have to learn how to make healthy foods like fruit, cheese, lean meats, vegetables and milk into "treats" that only seem forbidden and fattening. That's what being a Slim Gourmet is all about!

Natural cosmetics offered ecology-minded women

By STANLEY H. SLOM
Dow Jones — Ottaway News

The woman who feeds her family organically grown foods, recycles her soft-drink bottles and keeps phosphates out of her washing machine has a few questions about a related matter:

How in good conscience can she walk out of the house in the morning knowing that she has just bathed her body in cosmetics that are saturated with chemicals?

And when she's finished with those cosmetics, what's she supposed to do with the non-biodegradable containers they came in? Throw them in the trash and let them become part of the rubbish despoiling a river bank somewhere?

Well, here's how she can do she can wash her face in raw eggs and beer. Or condition her skin with strawberries. Or rub it with avocado or cantaloupe. Or pat it with cucumber or celery juice.

Or take a bath in a herb tea.

Indeed, there are any number of things she can do for skin with fruits and vegetables and other natural ingredients, and when she's finished she can take the container back to the store for a refill.

For the ecology movement has touched the cosmetics business.

So far, it isn't much more than a touch because most of the $6 billion-a-year industry goes on as before, turning out a profusion of creams, lotions and ointments rich in isopropyl ester of lanolin, ozokerite, vegetable oil triglyceride and other chemical ingredients too secret to mention or too hard to spell. They come in a wide variety of pretty glass and plastic containers that are easy enough to throw away but difficult for sanitation men to destroy.

But at least one established firm, Bonne Bell Inc. of Cleveland and one new company, Apothecare Inc. of New York, have taken the ecology movement seriously enough (or seen enough profit in it) to prepare lines of cosmetics that no woman need be embarrassed to wear even on Earth Day.

The use of natural ingredients has at least the indirect support of the Food and Drug Administration, which has taken an increasingly critical look at the chemicals that men, women and children routinely put on their faces and bodies.

In January, the FDA proposed sweeping regulations to limit the public's exposure to hexachlorophene and other germ-killing agents found in cleansers, soaps and cosmetics.

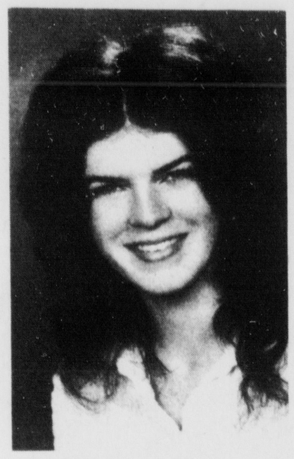

But most of the pressure for change comes not from the government nor from the industry but from women themselves, particularly from young, well-educated and resolute women who have been "sensitized" to environmental issues.

"We realized several years ago that ecology-minded people, especially young ones, were becoming disenchanted with cosmetics," says Jess Bell, the president of Bonne Bell. "Some wanted no cosmetics at all."

And so the 45-year-old cosmetics company, which has annual sales of about $40 million, decided to create a line of beauty creams based on avocado, cucumber, strawberry, celery, and other fruits and vegetables.

Bonne Bell's initial experiments were a failure. As a concession to its ecology-minded customers, the company didn't use any preservatives; the resulting products were less than satisfactory. But the company then developed a mix-it-yourself system that requires just a modicum of preservatives. The lotion is mixed with ground fruits or vegetables by the user.

There are skeptics who say the new cosmetics are more a result of crass commercialism than environmental concern, but whatever the impetus the cosmetics seem to be paying off.

Easy to make

French fashion designer Jacques Esterel, saying that only those who wear perfect sizes can squeeze into factory-made clothes, opened the 1972-73 fall winter shows in Paris at the stroke of midnight with allegedly easy-to-make styles for girls with little dressmakers or sewing machines at home. The geometrically shaped dresses are buttoned on the side and elegant, bringing haute couture out of the salons and into the home sewing room.

Flood plain building led to tragedy on Susquehanna

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Hundreds of towns in Pennsylvania that were built along the banks of the Susquehanna and the Schuylkill rivers lost a gamble with nature in June.

The usually placid rivers were turned into raging torrents by tropical storm Agnes. Thousands were left homeless.

The Army Corps of Engineers is now engaged in a massive study to find ways to keep the main waterways in check, and hopefully, prevent a recurrence of the worst floods in the state's history.

The engineers know, however, even if millions of dollars are spent on flood control, there is no guarantee that the many towns and villages along the two rivers would be safe from rising water.

Nicholas Barbieri, chief of the Corp's Flood Management Service in Philadelphia, believes poor planning years ago was responsible for the present plight of the towns and cities.

"People have always built along flood plains," Barbieri said. "These are very conducive to development.

"They are very flat areas that are less costly to develop and close to an important resource —water."

Barbeieri and Carl F. Enson are heading the study of the Schuylkill River for the Corps. Joseph Book, a Corp engineer in Baltimore, is working on a study of the Susquehanna.

Enson said the Corps can recommend ways to minimize the risk of flooding but can not eliminate it.

"We can't guarentee absolute protection," he said. "Let's face it, when you're located in a flood plain you stand the risk of getting flooded. The best thing to do if you don't want to be flooded again is to relocate."

The corps admits that relocation is not a realistic answer for most towns, located for centuries along the river banks.

"We'll come in and determine what the flood plain is, then let the town use the information in any future planning," Barbieri said. "We're not discouraging building, we're just shooting for a wise use of land on a flood plain."

Barbieri said communities hit by the floods may swear to be more careful with planning in the future.

"Than all of a sudden things will get back to normal. There will be pressures for development, pressures for new communities. All of these pressures will have to be balanced," he said.

"I think a great deal of development has been done out of ignorance and avarice," Book said. "All we can do is give advice. We give the facts, but the communities do the planning.

"It's as simple as saying if you're above a certain point you are safe, if you're below you are taking a chance."

Since clearing the flood plains is not a realistic answer in most cases, the corps plans to concentrate on controlling the rivers.

There are many options. One is to build a dam at the breakwaters of a river to protect the areas downstream.

There is local flood protection, where towns can build dikes and levees or enlarge the river channel.

The third is flood proofing, protecting homes and factories from serious flood damage.

"The fourth alternative is to do nothing at all," Enson said.

"It may not be wise to apply flood control to a specific area.

It may not be economically or socially acceptable."

"I am sure that something will be done, and that we'll end up providing protection," Enson said. "Dams will probably be the most viable alternative, along with local flood protection."

The corps' study of the Schuylkill will probably take three or four years. It is the first such study ever undertaken of the river. The Susquehanna was the subject of a corps study completed in 1970.

Other studies of the Susquehanna resulted in the construction of dikes, small dams and other flood control devices.

Construction of one large dam on the Juniata River near Raystown is partially completed. Construction of another dam on the Susquehanna near the New York border is about to get underway.

Book said present flood control measures on the Susquehanna could not handle the record-breaking June floods. The corps will probably have to revamp its entire 1970 study to include the data from the recent flooding, Book said.

Enson estimated that it would take 10 to 15 years before all flood control projects on the Schuylkill were completed.

"I would be surprised to see 100 per cent acceptance of flood control projects," Book said. "It's one of those things we have to face. People say,, 'We don't want flood protection, we'd rather have the view.' The government changes its priorities and work is stalled."

"But we're like doctors, all we can do is prescribe the remedy, it's up to the patients to take the medicine."

Hikers overrun some parks

Wilderness getting a bit crowded

SEQUOIA NATIONAL PARK, Calif. (UPI)—Backpacking in the Sierra Nevada is not the solitary communion with nature it used to be—at least in some parts of the high country.

Sections of wilderness are being overrun with hikers, and as a result the National Park Service and the U.S. Forest Service are requiring back packers to obtain permits before they go into wilderness regions.

In a few years, high country enthusiasts may even have to get reservations ahead of time.

"We are trying to keep the human use within limits that the country can stand," explained James Howell, information ranger at Sequoia National Park. "If we get too many people in one area there will be pollution and trampling of the vegetation," he said.

The wilderness permits were first issued last year "just to get people ready for the requirement," Hoaell said.

"This year if you do not have one, a ranger will issue you a permit and a warning," he said. "Next year we might become a little more strict."

The Park Service already has become strict in some cases. At both ends of the popular Rae Lakes loop between Cedar Grove and Independence, for example, the Park Service requires permits before hikers can begin their trip. During the July 4 weekend, Howell said, some hikers were turned away or rerouted on other trails.

While the possibility of waiting in line to get into a wilderness area may be anathema to some purists, even hiking buffs agree something must be done to insure that wilderness areas of California don't become beaten down by an excess of hiking boot prints.

"We know something has to be done but we think there should be some other system than purely restricting permits," said Joe Fontaine, a Bakersfield, Calif. school teacher and regional vice president of the Sierra Club.

He said the Sierra Club has not yet formulated a policy on what to do about overuse of the back country although the conservationist organization hopes to issue a statement on the matter later this year.

"Personally, however, I think the restrictions at Rae Lakes are necessary," he said.

Nevertheless, he said, there ought to be another way to encourage hikers to move out of overused areas and into regions now getting little use.

"I think a person should have freedom of movement once he gets into the wilderness," he said. "If you tell people they must follow an itinerary it takes away part of the experience".

He suggested educational programs, building trails into underused areas and closing some trails in heavily used regions as possible alternatives.

Howell pointed out that the information gained from the permits, which can be fed through a computer, may result in wilderness management programs similar to Fontaine's suggestions.

"The information will more accurately tell us about how many people used the area so we can tell where use may have to be restricted or what other areas should be opened," he said.

He said in the next few years the Park and Forest Services, utilizing data from the computer, undoubtedly will set more restrictions on other areas of the high country similar to those imposed on the Rae Lakes Loop.

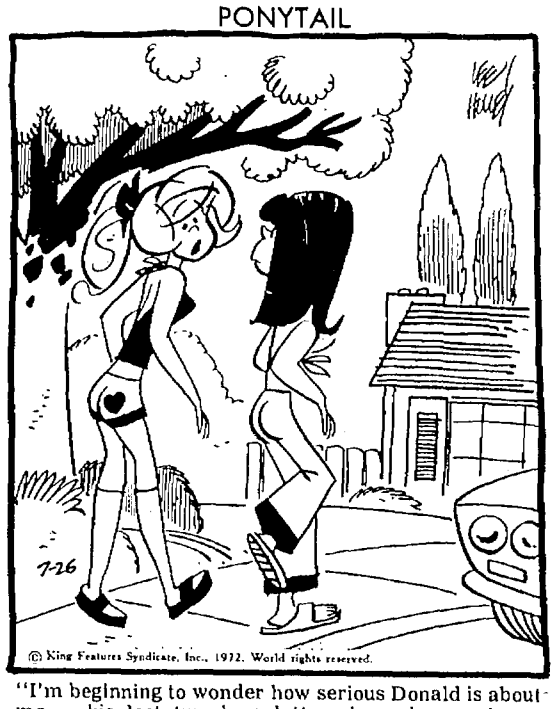

He said it was possible that within five years reservations may be required for some areas.

Howell noted that back country visitor use in the park ranged from 57,000 in 1962 to 38,600 in 1965, and then burgeoned to 95,500 in 1968 and 207,800 in 1971.

The Sierra Club's Fontaine saw the increase in use of wilderness areas as a doubled-edged sword. "It's bad, of course, because of the trampling of the wilderness," he said. "But it is good because more people are becoming aware of what the wilderness is and those people will support saving it."

"The fact that wilderness is being overused is the primary reason why we need more area set aside as wilderness," he said.

Flood plain building led to tragedy on Susquehanna

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Hundreds of towns in Pennsylvania that were built along the banks of the Susquehanna and the Schuylkill rivers lost a gamble with nature in June.

The usually placid rivers were turned into raging torrents by tropical storm Agnes. Thousands were left homeless.

The Army Corps of Engineers is now engaged in a massive study to find ways to keep the main waterways in check, and hopefully, prevent a recurrence of the worst floods in the state's history.

The engineers know, however, even if millions of dollars are spent on flood control, there is no guarantee that the many towns and villages along the two rivers would be safe from rising water.

Nicholas Barbieri, chief of the Corp's Flood Management Service in Philadelphia, believes poor planning years ago was responsible for the present plight of the towns and cities.

"People have always built along flood plains," Barbieri said. "These are very conducive to development.

"They are very flat areas that are less costly to develop and close to an important resource —water."

Barbeieri and Carl F. Enson are heading the study of the Schuylkill River for the Corps. Joseph Book, a Corp engineer in Baltimore, is working on a study of the Susquehanna.

Enson said the Corps can recommend ways to minimize the risk of flooding but can not eliminate it.

"We can't guarentee absolute protection," he said. "Let's face it, when you're located in a flood plain you stand the risk of getting flooded. The best thing to do if you don't want to be flooded again is to relocate."

The corps admits that relocation is not a realistic answer for most towns, located for centuries along the river banks.

"We'll come in and determine what the flood plain is, then let the town use the information in any future planning," Barbieri said. "We're not discouraging building, we're just shooting for a wise use of land on a flood plain."

Barbieri said communities hit by the floods may swear to be more careful with planning in the future.

"Than all of a sudden things will get back to normal. There will be pressures for development, pressures for new communities. All of these pressures will have to be balanced," he said.

"I think a great deal of development has been done out of ignorance and avarice," Book said. "All we can do is give advice. We give the facts, but the communities do the planning.

"It's as simple as saying if you're above a certain point you are safe, if you're below you are taking a chance."

Since clearing the flood plains is not a realistic answer in most cases, the corps plans to concentrate on controlling the rivers.

There are many options. One is to build a dam at the breakwaters of a river to protect the areas downstream.

There is local flood protection, where towns can build dikes and levees or enlarge the river channel.

The third is flood proofing, protecting homes and factories from serious flood damage.

"The fourth alternative is to do nothing at all," Enson said.

"It may not be wise to apply flood control to a specific area.

It may not be economically or socially acceptable."

"I am sure that something will be done, and that we'll end up providing protection," Enson said. "Dams will probably be the most viable alternative, along with local flood protection."

The corps' study of the Schuylkill will probably take three or four years. It is the first such study ever undertaken of the river. The Susquehanna was the subject of a corps study completed in 1970.

Other studies of the Susquehanna resulted in the construction of dikes, small dams and other flood control devices.

Construction of one large dam on the Juniata River near Raystown is partially completed. Construction of another dam on the Susquehanna near the New York border is about to get underway.

Book said present flood control measures on the Susquehanna could not handle the record-breaking June floods. The corps will probably have to revamp its entire 1970 study to include the data from the recent flooding, Book said.

Enson estimated that it would take 10 to 15 years before all flood control projects on the Schuylkill were completed.

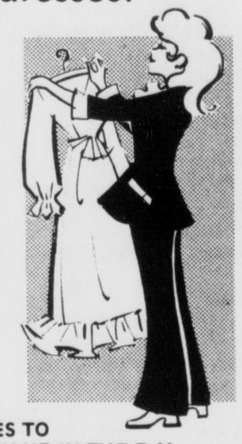

"I would be surprised to see 100 per cent acceptance of flood control projects," Book said. "It's one of those things we have to face. People say,, 'We don't want flood protection, we'd rather have the view,' The government changes its priorities and work is stalled."

"But we're like doctors, all we can do is prescribe the remedy, it's up to the patients to take the medicine."

Hikers overrun some parks

Wilderness getting a bit crowded

SEQUOIA NATIONAL PARK, Calif. (UPI)—Backpacking in the Sierra Nevada is not the solitary communion with nature it used to be—at least in some parts of the high country.

Sections of wilderness are being overrun with hikers, and as a result the National Park Service and the U.S. Forest Service are requiring back packers to obtain permits before they go into wilderness regions.

In a few years, high country enthusiasts may even have to get reservations ahead of time.

"We are trying to keep the human use within limits that the country can stand," explained James Howell, information ranger at Sequoia National Park. "If we get too many people in one area there will be pollution and trampling of the vegetation," he said.

The wilderness permits were first issued last year "just to get people ready for the requirement," Hoaell said.

"This year if you do not have one, a ranger will issue you a permit and a warning," he said. "Next year we might become a little more strict."

The Park Service already has become strict in some cases. At both ends of the popular Rae Lakes loop between Cedar Grove and Independence, for example, the Park Service requires permits before hikers can begin their trip. During the July 4 weekend, Howell said, some hikers were turned away or rerouted on other trails.

While the possibility of waiting in line to get into a wilderness area may be anathema to some purists, even hiking buffs agree something must be done to insure that wilderness areas of California don't become beaten down by an excess of hiking boot prints.

"We know something has to be done but we think there should be some other system than purely restricting permits," said Joe Fontaine, a Bakersfield, Calif. school teacher and regional vice president of the Sierra Club.

He said the Sierra Club has not yet formulated a policy on what to do about overuse of the back country although the conservationist organization hopes to issue a statement on the matter later this year.

"Personally, however, I think the restrictions at Rae Lakes are necessary," he said.

Nevertheless, he said, there ought to be another way to encourage hikers to move out of overused areas and into regions now getting little use.

"I think a person should have freedom of movement once he gets into the wilderness," he said. "If you tell people they must follow an itinerary it takes away part of the experience".

He suggested educational programs, building trails into underused areas and closing some trails in heavily used regions as possible alternatives.

Howell pointed out that the information gained from the permits, which can be fed through a computer, may result in wilderness management programs similar to Fontaine's suggestions.

"The information will more accurately tell us about how many people used the area so we can tell where use may have to be restricted or what other areas should be opened," he said.

He said in the next few years the Park and Forest Services, utilizing data from the computer, undoubtedly will set more restrictions on other areas of the high country similar to those imposed on the Rae Lakes Loop.

He said it was possible that within five years reservations may be required for some areas.

Howell noted that back country visitor use in the park ranged from 57,000 in 1962 to 38,600 in 1965, and then burgeoned to 95,500 in 1968 and 207,800 in 1971.

The Sierra Club's Fontaine saw the increase in use of wilderness areas as a doubled-edged sword. "It's bad, of course, because of the trampling of the wilderness," he said. "But it is good because more people are becoming aware of what the wilderness is and those people will support saving it."

"The fact that wilderness is being overused is the primary reason why we need more area set aside as wilderness," he said.

Egypt enters new phase with ouster of Russian aid

CAIRO (UPI)—The taxi driver chuckled, slapped his knee and shouted to nobody in particular "Sadat good—Russkis bad."

Egyptians packing the sidewalk smiled and nodded to each other: "Aywah" (yes).

It might have been 1956 and the end of British colonialism. But it was July 18, 1972 and Egyptians were hopeful another chapter in the history of their nation had been written —the beginning of the end of the massive Russian military presence in the country.

President Anwar Sadat announced that he was ordering all Soviet military advisers to leave the country —an estimated 15,000 Russians who advised the armed forces on everything from flying supersonic MIG 21 fighters to squad ambush tactics.

The dream of the czars to gain a major foothold in Egypt had suffered what political observers said was Russia's most serious setback here since 1955.

From a relatively modest beginning in 1955, the Soviet presense in Egypt grew until, according to one Arab newspaper, more than $7 billion had been poured into the country.

In remote desert outposts, khaki-clad Russians trained Egyptians how to handle SAM-2 and SAM-3 missiles.

Others toiled alongside Arabs under the blazing sun at Aswan to construct the nation's symbol of its future —the high dam.

Across the Nile valley and deserts, Russians could be seen at work on everything from irrigation projects to military maneuvers.

The dramatic turn of events came when Moscow rebuffed Sadat in his search for still more sophisticated weapons for possible use against Israel.

In future, Sadat said, "the military installations and equipment which were established on our soil after the June, 1967, war are considered the private property of Egypt and are under the operation of our armed forces.

"Our sons in the armed forces will replace (the advisers) in everything they did."

Surprisingly perhaps, the Russian advisers departed from a land and people with whom they had little in common, with great reluctance.

Most of the Russians knew few Egyptians. But they would obviously miss the amenities of life.

"I like this place because I can dance," a Russian wife once told me. "I can go to parties, get high, let myself go."

Another woman, the daughter of a Soviet general, stared at the shopwindows, bare by western standards, and sighted "there are so many things here one can buy."

Most of the Russians here had never had it so good — higher wages for being overseas, servants for many, a well stocked embassy PX which offered English cigarettes, French wines and other western luxuries, and Mediterranean beaches where Soviet pilots often buzzed other Russians sun-bathing below.

The Egyptians watched and many smouldered. Some demonstrated when they were banned from beaches because of the Russian military presence there.

Students took to the streets of Cairo in January, partly to protest the Soviet attitude toward Egyptian demands for more weapons.

Shopekeepers learned to speak Russian yet one told me in English "bah —the Russians."

"Serves them right," one man said as he sipped thick Turkish coffee in a cafe near the downtown Abdin palace. "If they refuse to give us weapons they should get out."

Along with the euphoria however there was uncertainty. "It's a great feeling now, but what about the future?" A student asked. "We are still no nearer war or peace."

A Beirut newspaper, An Nahar, estimated recently that total Egyptian debt to the Soviet Union for defense and development was some $7 billion —equal to the value of all of Egypt's agricultural land —and that Russian military help was running at a rate of $5 million a day.

Before Sadat issued his explusion order, there were an estimated 20,000 Soviet military experts in the country including 200 pilots, and up to 10,000 Russians working on civil projects.

The London-based institute of strategic studies gave this rundown on Soviet-operated air defenses in Egypt:

—70 SA2 surface-to-air missile sites with six launchers each.

—65 SA3 (and possibly SA4) sites with four launchers each.

—A radar network.

—Six squadrons of MIG21 interceptors.

—150 MIG 21J and possibly MIG23 aircraft.

Only a few of the missile sites, those close to the Suez Canal, were operated by Egyptians before the "go home" order.

In all the institute said, Egypt has a 257,000-man Army using mostly Soviet tanks and heavy guns, a 25,000-man air force with 523 combat aircraft —all Soviet-made, and a 14,000-man navy which has 12 submarines and four Russian-made destroyers as its spearhead.

In addition, the Soviets enjoy extensive base facilities at Alexandria port and Mersa Matruh, which can handle submarines, and has large air installations in Cairo West, once Britain's key base.

The Soviet fleet, comprising 25 warships, rising to 50 in times of crisis, makes extensive use of Mediterranean anchorages. The accessibility of Egypt and Syrian ports has helped it to win political influence for the Soviet Union in the region.

Sadat has said Soviet instructors will continue to serve with the armed forces but the advisers must leave. No official figures are available but Arab news reports commonly put the total of Russian military men at 20,000 of which 15,000 are normally considered "advisers."

The instructors were sent to Egypt after the 1967 war to train Egyptians on new Soviet weaponry. The advisers arrived in 1970 to install and man the missile sites.

The Soviet Union entered the Arab world in a big way when it concluded a weapons agreement with the late president Gamal Abdel Nasser in 1955. But its contribution to civil development has been considerable and Egypt is by far the largest recipient of Soviet aid in the area.

More visitors to Czechoslovakia

NEW YORK (UPI) — American visitors to Czechoslavakia in 1971 totaled 46,112, a 5.5 per cent increase over 1970, says the Czechoslovak Travel Bureau in New York.

Vaclav Dubsky, North American director of the bureau, said it is hoped the 50,000 mark will be reached in 1972.

Kentucky calling

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI) — About 35 million visitors came to Kentucky in 1971. They spent $426 million while traveling more than 5 billion miles.

Surprisingly perhaps, the Russian advisers departed from a land and people with whom they had little in common, with great reluctance.

Most of the Russians knew few Egyptians. But they would obviously miss the amenities of life.

"I like this place because I can dance," a Russian wife once told me. "I can go to parties, get high, let myself go."

Another woman, the daughter of a Soviet general, stared at the shopwindows, bare by western standards, and sighted "there are so many things here one can buy."

Most of the Russians here had never had it so good — higher wages for being overseas, servants for many, a well stocked embassy PX which offered English cigarettes, French wines and other western luxuries, and Mediterranean beaches where Soviet pilots often buzzed other Russians sun-bathing below.

The Egyptians watched and many smouldered. Some demonstrated when they were banned from beaches because of the Russian military presence there.

Students took to the streets of Cairo in January, partly to protest the Soviet attitude toward Egyptian demands for more weapons.

Shopekeepers learned to speak Russian yet one told me in English "bah —the Russians."

"Serves them right," one man said as he sipped thick Turkish coffee in a cafe near the downtown Abdin palace. "If they refuse to give us weapons they should get out."

Along with the euphoria however there was uncertainty. "It's a great feeling now, but what about the future?" A student asked. "We are still no nearer war or peace."

A Beirut newspaper, An Nahar, estimated recently that total Egyptian debt to the Soviet Union for defense and development was some $7 billion —equal to the value of all of Egypt's agricultural land —and that Russian military help was running at a rate of $5 million a day.

Before Sadat issued his explusion order, there were an estimated 20,000 Soviet military experts in the country including 200 pilots, and up to 10,000 Russians working on civil projects.

The London-based institute of strategic studies gave this rundown on Soviet-operated air defenses in Egypt:

—70 SA2 surface-to-air missile sites with six launchers each.

—65 SA3 (and possibly SA4) sites with four launchers each.

—A radar network.

—Six squadrons of MIG21 interceptors.

—150 MIG 21J and possibly MIG23 aircraft.

Only a few of the missile sites, those close to the Suez Canal, were operated by Egyptians before the "go home" order.

In all the institute said, Egypt has a 257,000-man Army using mostly Soviet tanks and heavy guns, a 25,000-man air force with 523 combat aircraft —all Soviet-made, and a 14,000-man navy which has 12 submarines and four Russian-made destroyers as its spearhead.

In addition, the Soviets enjoy extensive base facilities at Alexandria port and Mersa Matruh, which can handle submarines, and has large air installations in Cairo West, once Britain's key base.

The Soviet fleet, comprising 25 warships, rising to 50 in times of crisis, makes extensive use of Mediterranean anchorages. The accessibility of Egypt and Syrian ports has helped it to win political influence for the Soviet Union in the region.

Sadat has said Soviet instructors will continue to serve with the armed forces but the advisers must leave. No official figures are available but Arab news reports commonly put the total of Russian military men at 20,000 of which 15,000 are normally considered "advisers."

The instructors were sent to Egypt after the 1967 war to train Egyptians on new Soviet weaponry. The advisers arrived in 1970 to install and man the missile sites.

The Soviet Union entered the Arab world in a big way when it concluded a weapons agreement with the late president Gamal Abdel Nasser in 1955. But its contribution to civil development has been considerable and Egypt is by far the largest recipient of Soviet aid in the area.

NEW YORK (UPI) — American visitors to Czechoslavakia in 1971 totaled 46,112, a 5.5 per cent increase over 1970, says the Czechoslovak Travel Bureau in New York.

Vaclav Dubsky, North American director of the bureau, said it is hoped the 50,000 mark will be reached in 1972.

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI) — About 35 million visitors came to Kentucky in 1971. They spent $426 million while traveling more than 5 billion miles.

Tax tips for flood victims

PHILADELPHIA — The Internal Revenue Service suggests that taxpayers who suffered losses of or damage to their homes, household goods, and other personal property in the recent disaster from Tropical Storm Agnes save this check list of things to consider doing:

—Making a list immediately of all property lost or damaged. The IRS has available a booklet designed to help in this task. These booklets are free and can be obtained at any IRS office at OEP Disaster Centers.

—Taking snapshots of damaged property after the flood to help back up determinations of post-flood fair market value on these properties. Properties to consider taking pictures of are: homes, trailers, garages and similar items.

—Filing an amended estimated tax declaration. Taxpayers who pay estimated tax may have already paid enough tax to match what they will owe. They can avoid paying in more estimated tax by filing an amended estimated tax declaration with IRS.

To help financially, the federal tax laws were just changed. Specifically, taxpayers who suffered flood losses before June 30 of this year in designated disaster areas can still claim those losses against last year's taxes.

Taxpayers suffering flood losses may file amended returns and receive quick tax refunds. Form 1040X can be used by individuals and form 1120X by corporations to file amended returns.

IRS personnel in local offices will assist people in filing amended returns and getting copies of their tax returns.

Amended returns should be sent to Philadphia Service Center, P.O. Box 6073, Philadelphia, Pa., 19114.

Taxpayers not desiring to claim the losses against their 1971 taxes may claim them on their 1972 returns to be filed in 1973.

County receives report on water

STROUDSBURG — Monroe County Commissioners Monday received a preliminary report concerning water resources in the eastern part of the county indicating that area has an overall water excess.

Submitted by Moody and Associates, Meadville, Pa., the water resource study is made on that portion of the county which is covered by the Tocks Island Regional Environmental Study.

The area covers 354 square miles which includes individual watersheds of the Bushkill Creek, Brodhead Creek, Marshalls Creek and Cherry Creek.

Reserving comment on the preliminary findings, the commissioners are awaiting the final report which will include all of Monroe County.

The commissioners had contracted for the report after expressing concern over the possible loss of the county's water through two actions: The first being the large sewer line loop proposed by the Delaware River Basin Commission; and the extraction of water from the northern part of the county by the Bethlehem Water Authority.

In another matter, the commissioners received notification of the new state regulations concerning eligiblity to vote in the Nov. 7 presidential election.

Solicitor Elmer D. Christine informed the board persons could register up to "about" one month prior to the upcoming election.

To register, one must be 18 years of age, a U.S. citizen for one month, and a resident in his election district for 30 days at the time of the election.

Reports from the Pennsylvania Department of Public Instruction indicate that throughout the commonwealth there will be approximately 185,000 high school students and 300,000 college students who will be eligible to participate in the Nov. 7 election.

The commissioners also received notification of extended powers concerning flood prevention under a law passed this year by the General Assembly.

The commissioners are now authorized to spend money for flood prevention and the cleaning of streams. Until passage of the act, the commissioners were not empowered to clean streams without first getting permission to do so from the Department of Environmental Resources.

'Communications miracle' performed in Plymouth

PLYMOUTH — On Monday a "communications miracle" occurred in the small flood-ravaged community of Plymouth, in the Wyoming Valley.

The Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania, with massive assistance from Western Electric, completely restored and brought a central office humming back to life in less than 30 days — chopping 12 weeks off the most optimistic projection for such a task.

The office was completely inundated by the raging Susquehanna River on June 23 when the rain from Tropical Storm Agnes caused that river to burst over its banks.

When the flood waters receded three days later, Bell and Western Electric employes began working around the clock in 12-hour shifts to restore communications.

Every piece of waterlogged equipment had to be stripped from frames, tossed into the street and carted off. Tons of new equipment, brought in by 26 trailers, replaced the old.

The first telephone call through the newly restored office was placed from Plymouth Mayor Edward F. Burns to Bell Company President William S. Cashel, Jr., in Philadelphia.

Jack Martin, Bell's acting manager, said the job done by the employes at the office had been "monumental".

"The restoration of our central office equipment represents a small but critical step on the road to total communications recovery in the Wyoming Valley," Martin said. "There is still limited long distance service originating here or anywhere in the Wyoming Valley. This is due to wet cable and other problems in the field. It's going to be a cable-bycable process to get everything fully operative again."

Martin explained that customers would be experiencing delays especially during business hours, and advised persons making long distance calls to do so in the early morning or late evening to speed completions.

He said incoming long distance calls would not pose as much of a problem.

Martin said the Plymouth central office serves 4,000 main stations. During the disaster which wiped the office out, Bell and Western Electric personnel constructed a 500-line capacity manual switchboard inside a tractor-trailer van sent to the scene by Michigan Bell.

"By July 10," said Martin, "less than three weeks after the flood hit, we were serving 260 customers with this arrangement."

Martin said it normally takes about 16 weeks to restore a central office of this size and that to have achieved such an objective in less than four weeks is "nothing short of fantastic."

However, in spite of the communications miracle, much remains to be done in the Wyoming Valley.

Martin said, "Our central offices at Wilkes-Barre and Kingston were also drowned out by flooding, and they are not yet back to normal operations. This is mainly because of the condition of our outside plant facilities.

Buyers must be told of state sewer law

STROUDSBURG — Clarification of a matter concerning the notification of land development owners that they must advise potential buyers of the existing sewerage regulations now in effect before purchase was advanced Monday by County Planning Administrator Doug Williams.

Williams said letters instructing owners of such developments to take this action would be sent out and they would instruct the owners to inform the buyer of these sewerage regulations.

"At the present time, owners of lots less than one acre in size may not install a sub-surface sewerage treatment on their property. As soon as the Weston plan is adopted, they will be able to, but not until then," he said, speculating that such adoption might be forthcoming.

"What this letter will do is tell these land developers that they must inform the buyer of this situation. I don't know what a land salesman would be telling a buyer now along these lines, but I think a buyer should be told of this situation," said Williams.

Monroe County Commissioners have agreed to the letter and now it is up to the Planning Commission to adopt the wording and send the letters.

Williams said the reason the Weston plan had yet to be submitted to the Planning Commission and also to the municipalities involved for approval was that revisions and updating had taken more time than expected.

Once these townships adopt the sub-division plan, it will be returned to the Planning Commission for their approval before it is turned over to the Commissioners.

"The Department of Environmental Resources (DER) says the plan was accepted by the state in September, 1970, and they said they sent the Planning Commission a letter stating this.

"But I have yet to receive a letter from them conforming this approval," said Williams. "I also would like a letter from the Commissioners saying the plan has been approved and also saying what criteria has been established for gaining such approval."

At 2 p.m. Saturday, a program on nature study will be presented at the Watergate area.

'Communications miracle' performed in Plymouth

PLYMOUTH — On Monday a "communications miracle" occurred in the small flood-ravaged community of Plymouth, in the Wyoming Valley.

The Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania, with massive assistance from Western Electric, completely restored and brought a central office humming back to life in less than 30 days — chopping 12 weeks off the most optimistic projection for such a task.

The office was completely inundated by the raging Susquehanna River on June 23 when the rain from Tropical Storm Agnes caused that river to burst over its banks.

When the flood waters receded three days later, Bell and Western Electric employes began working around the clock in 12-hour shifts to restore communications.

Every piece of waterlogged equipment had to be stripped from frames, tossed into the street and carted off. Tons of new equipment, brought in by 26 trailers, replaced the old.

The first telephone call through the newly restored office was placed from Plymouth Mayor Edward F. Burns to Bell Company President William S. Cashel, Jr., in Philadelphia.

Jack Martin, Bell's acting manager, said the job done by the employes at the office had been "monumental".

"The restoration of our central office equipment represents a small but critical step on the road to total communications recovery in the Wyoming Valley," Martin said. "There is still limited long distance service originating here or anywhere in the Wyoming Valley. This is due to wet cable and other problems in the field. It's going to be a cable-bycable process to get everything fully operative again."

Martin explained that customers would be experiencing delays especially during business hours, and advised persons making long distance calls to do so in the early morning or late evening to speed completions.

He said incoming long distance calls would not pose as much of a problem.

Martin said the Plymouth central office serves 4,000 main stations. During the disaster which wiped the office out, Bell and Western Electric personnel constructed a 500-line capacity manual switchboard inside a tractor-trailer van sent to the scene by Michigan Bell.

"By July 10," said Martin, "less than three weeks after the flood hit, we were serving 260 customers with this arrangement."

Martin said it normally takes about 16 weeks to restore a central office of this size and that to have achieved such an objective in less than four weeks is "nothing short of fantastic."

However, in spite of the communications miracle, much remains to be done in the Wyoming Valley.

Martin said, "Our central offices at Wilkes-Barre and Kingston were also drowned out by flooding, and they are not yet back to normal operations. This is mainly because of the condition of our outside plant facilities.

Buyers must be told of state sewer law

STROUDSBURG — Clarification of a matter concerning the notification of land development owners that they must advise potential buyers of the existing sewerage regulations now in effect before purchase was advanced Monday by County Planning Administrator Doug Williams.

Williams said letters instructing owners of such developments to take this action would be sent out and they would instruct the owners to inform the buyer of these sewerage regulations.

"At the present time, owners of lots less than one acre in size may not install a sub-surface sewerage treatment on their property. As soon as the Weston plan is adopted, they will be able to, but not until then," he said, speculating that such adoption might be forthcoming.

"What this letter will do is tell these land developers that they must inform the buyer of this situation. I don't know what a land salesman would be telling a buyer now along these lines, but I think a buyer should be told of this situation." said Williams.

Monroe County Commissioners have agreed to the letter and now it is up to the Planning Commission to adopt the wording and send the letters.

Williams said the reason the Weston plan had yet to be submitted to the Planning Commission and also to the municipalities involved for approval was that revisions and updating had taken more time than expected.

Once these townships adopt the sub-division plan, it will be returned to the Planning Commission for their approval before it is turned over to the Commissioners.

"The Department of Environmental Resources (DER) says the plan was accepted by the state in September, 1970, and they said they sent the Planning Commission a letter stating this.

"But I have yet to receive a letter from them conforming this approval," said Williams. "I also would like a letter from the Commissioners saying the plan has been approved and also saying what criteria has been established for gaining such approval."

Motel placed on block

STROUDSBURG — Laurel Motor Inn, Rte. 209 Smithfield Township will go on the auction block at 2 p.m. today in the hallway of the Monroe County Courthouse during a sheriff's sale.

According to the sheriff's office, an estimated $5,850 in back taxes are owed on the property which includes 32 acres of land, 20 motel units, office and living quarters, a 120-seat restaurant, 40-seat banquet room, swimming pool, cottage and cocktail lounge.

The Monroe County Security Bank and Trust Company is reported to hold a $110,000 first mortgage on the property, and Harry Creveling, of Berwick, holds a second mortgage on the property in the amount of $60,000.

State's hospital board law draws no comment locally

EAST STROUDSBURG — The administrator of the General Hospital of Monroe County, Charles E. Swisher, had no comment Tuesday on a proposal by Gov. Milton Shapp calling for broad community representation on hospital boards.

Swisher said he would issue a statement after public hearings, slated for Thursday and Friday in Harrisburg, are completed.

Shapp's proposal would require for the first time Pennsylvania's 282 general and special hospitals have community representation — including consumers.

"This includes representation of different age groups, minority groups, women, people of different occupations and income levels, clinic patients and others generally representative of the patient community," Shapp said.

"In this year of the consumer, we intend to see that all citizens are assured health care services — one of the most costly items of family life," he added.

The proposal also recommends each hospital have a citizens advisory board representing a mix of health services consumers and community members served by the institution.

Another innovation he recommended would require all hospital construction or renovation plans be reviewed by a health planning agency when more than $100,000 is involved.

Shapp called this an interim measure "to halt the excessive and expensive duplications of health facilities."

The proposals would also require a "certificate of approval" for non-profit hospitals, issued by the Department of Public Welfare only to institutions meeting new requirements.

The regulations, if adopted, will replace existing guidelines which went into effect in 1966. The proposed rules follow the requirements of the Joint Commission on Accrediation of Hospitals, Shapp said.

Court sentences juveniles

STROUDSBURG — Two juveniles were granted permission by Judge Arlington W. Williams Tuesday to leave the state after being placed on probation for acts of delinquency which they committed earlier this year.

In the first case, a 17-year-old Stroudsburg youth, who had pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of narcotics, was placed on probation for a year and permitted to move to a farm in British Columbia, Canada, with two older brothers.

The youth had been arrested earlier this year when he and a companion were parked in front of an off-duty policeman's house and acted suspiciously causing an investigation.

The companion was sentenced earlier this month in a closed door session in Judge Williams' chambers to two years probation with the provision that he undergo psychiatric treatment. It had been his second offense involving narcotics.

In placing the boy on probation, Judge Williams commented that a report from the Allentown State Hospital confirmed the court's suspicion that the youth had emotional problems, and the psychiatrist concurred in the boy's wish to live on the Canadian farm.

In a second juvenile case, a 17-year-old East Stroudsburg youth, charged with burglary of a service station, was placed on probation for a year and granted permission by the court to move to Florida to reside with a friend of his family.

The youth, who had previously been incarcerated at the state correctional institution at Camp Hill, was also ordered to undergo regular psychiatric examination while in Florida.

In a third matter, a 16-year-old Stroudsburg boy, charged with assault and battery against a teacher at Stroudsburg High School, was ordered to the State Forestry Camp, Hickory Run State Park, White Haven until further order of the court.

Judge Williams commented in his disposition of the matter that the psychiatric report on the youth indicated a need for insitutional care to overcome emotional problems.

Special voter registration to be continued for youths

STROUDSBURG — The Monroe County Commissioners will continue the present policy of setting up special registration facilities to attempt to sign-up newly eligible 18-20-year-old voters.

Monroe County Commissioner Mrs. Nancy Shukaitis said registration centers were previously set up in all of the area high schools and at East Stroudsburg State College to enable students to register.

Education Secretary John C. Pittenger had called for centers to be provided for college and high students to register to vote earlier this week, and Mrs. Shukaitis stated the commissioners agree with Pittenger's statement.

"We have been holding special registrations in the past and will continue to do so," said Mrs. Shukaitis.

Mrs. Cherry Rahn, Monroe County registar, had no figures available on the number of 18 to 20 year-olds who had been registered in the drives, but estimated there were "at least 1,500." Last year, in the period from April to June to September, 282 new voters registered, Mrs. Rahn noted.

Pittenger said there are about 185,000 high school students and 300,000 college students within the new 18-20 voting age in the state.

He has asked all school district superintendents, intermediate unit directors and college and university presidents to cooperate with election officials.

"The Supreme Court's ruling which granted 18-20 year-olds the right to vote will have little impact on our system of government if we do not make explicit efforts to help students register and vote," Pittenger said.

"Schools have traditionally considered the development of good citizenship as one of their most important tasks. I can't think of any more direct way to foster responsible citizenship than for schools to get involved first-hand to encourage registration."

Eastburg High to initiate program for 'mini-courses'

BY CONRAD GROVE
Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — Nearly 20 per cent of the students in East Stroudsburg High School will carry between 15 and 18 subjects next year.

The school is initiating a "mini-course" program, offering a wide range of topics in social studies and English, with each course pared to a nine-week session.

"Kids like to get down to the issues and get out," says Cummings Piatt, principal. "We've got to cut out the padding and get down to learning."

At least half of Pennsylvania's schools are experimenting with mini-courses, although educational philosophies and time lengths vary.

But while some schools just threw out attractive course descriptions without sequence to entice students, East Stroudsburg has attempted to structure its program, Piatt notes.

In 10th grade English, for example, a student is required to take one form course, one grammar course, one composition course and one free choice.

Yet for the grammar requirement, the student is free to choose one of four alternatives: Modern Spelling, Developmental Linquistics, Advanced Grammar or Vocational English.

A sophomore student has similar choices in the other two requirements and "free" category. Under the system, up to eight English topics could be carried that year.

While four social studies courses are required yearly, each subject will be non-graded, with sophomores, juniors and seniors enrolled in the course picked.

Ten social studies courses are offered, ranging from Contemporary U.S. Problems to Black History to Free Press in a Free Society to The Dilemma of Welfare.

In 11th and 12 grade English, two free choices are required and topics (10 for juniors and 15 for seniors) again touch on contemporary life, such as Pop Rock Poetry, Ethnic and Social Literature and Filmmaking.

The move represents a push toward the humanities, points out Piatt, as American education is attempting to close the gap created by the science surge in the 1960s.

Coupled with the increased offerings, East Stroudsburg will swing into an eight-period day next year, cutting class length to 40 minutes. A student is required to take seven courses during the day.

Student response has been "just fantastic," says Piatt. "I've had many seniors say they're sorry they missed a shot at this.

"And I'd be more excited about studying Shakespeare if I could choose him for nine weeks rather than a whole year."

The system won't allow lackadasical attitudes by either students or teachers, he contends, as the learning process has to be budgeted within nine weeks.

"If we can accomplish learning by saying let's concentrate for a short time, then we're doing what we should be doing.

"The working world is the same. You've got a job, you've got to study it — and get it done."

S-burg school registration being conducted daily

STROUDSBURG — New student registration for the Stroudsburg School District is being held daily in the guidance ofice of the high school from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. for students in grades 7 through 12.

Counselors urge all families moving into the district to take advantage of the early registration in order that schedules may be computerized prior to the opening day of school. Counselors will be available to assist with course selections.

Registrations for elementary children will be held after Aug. 14, at the elementary schools.

Further information can be obtained by conducting the Stroudsburg High School.

MIDDLE SMITHFIELD TOWNSHIP — Operators of four vehicles escaped injury Tuesday afternoon in a collision on Rt. 209, Middle Smithfield Township.

State Police at Stroudsburg reported a tractor-trailer driven by Calvin Moyer, Millville, W. Va., was traveling south on Rt. 209, when after descending a grade he was unable to stop and collided with a vehicle operated by Barry Seip, Moyertown, N.J.

Seip's auto then collided head-on with a car driven by Sidney Creager, Waynesboro, Moyer's tractor-trailer collided with the rear of a vehicle operated by Richard Gorton, Bethlehem, demolishing a trailer Gorton's auto was pulling.

Job mart increase reported

STROUDSBURG — Preliminary estimates compiled by the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry, Bureau of Employment Security, indicate that total employment in Monroe County rose more than 2,000 workers in a period from mid-April to mid-June.

Total unemployment in the area is currently calculated at 900, a number which remained constant throughout this period. Despite the significant gain in area employment, due to the hiring of both local and out-of-state persons, unemployment did not decline proportionately because of the number of local new entrants and summer workers seeking area employment.

Total employment in the area rose from to its current level of 25,000, with most gains being registered in manufacturing industries, non-manufacturing industries and the self-employed, unpaid family and domestic workers groups. Agricultural employment remained stable during the two-month period. The gains indicate 1,000 more workers than the 24,000 workers indicated in June 1971.

Nonmanufacturing industries employment, currently placed at 17,000, increased by 1,700 workers since mid-April primarily due to seasonal influences that stimulated hiring in summer hiring in summer camps and resort hotels. A gain of 2,200 workers was recorded in these service industry establishments.

The self-employed, unpaid family and domestic workers group with an estimated 2,400 workers, increased by 200 workers while farm employment remained at 400 workers.

Shooting probed

BLAKESLEE — The body of a 22-year-old Kingston man was found in a parking lot near Blakeslee Corners Tuesday morning, with multiple gunshot wounds to the head.

Pennsylvania State Police at Fern Ridge reported the body of Larry Rosenthal was found near his vehicle near Sheiner's Market, Rt. 115, Blakeslee, at about 9:15 a.m. State police suspect the gunshot wounds, from a 20-gauge shotgun, were self-inflicted.

Trooper Ronald Grzyboski and Deputy Coroner William Kresge are conducting an investigation.

Sewer bill defeat blasted by Congressman Rooney

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Rep. Fred Rooney, D-Bethlehem, strongly denounced the recent defeat of a bill which would have accelerated funding for "dozens of pending" water and sewer projects, including an expected future expansion of the sewer plant in East Stroudsburg.

Donald Gage, East Stroudsburg borough manager, said the defeat of the legislation before congress concerning water and sewer projects should not directly affect the borough, since no formal application for funds has been sent to Washington.

"We have only conducted a feasibility study for expanding our sewerage treatment facility, and have not determined the cost or the specific design as of yet," he said.

He pointed out an engineering study will have to be made along with obtaining information from different regulatory agencies.

Gage admitted the defeat of the funding bill might have a future affect on East Stroudsburg's sewerage plans, but stated, "We will have to study the different pieces of legislation before Congress before making any application and deciding anything specific."

According to legislative aides to Rep. Rooney, the defeated water and sewerage funding bill would have authorized the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) to make emergency grants to state and local governments for the construction and expansion of sewerage, water treatment, and other public facilities.

The grants could have covered up to 100 per cent of costs for construction, and the aggregate sum authorized would have been $5 billion.

Rep. Rooney said the bill would also have created employment opportunities for 500,000 people.

"This bill could have represented one of the most significent steps Congress has taken in recent years to assist our local governments with their tremendous development needs," Rooney said.

Opponents of the bill argued on the House floor that this legislation would be inflationary. Several Congressmen questioned said that many application requests for money were overstated.

A House committee recently reported that $12.6 billion worth of water and sewer projects applications are pending, which would include 37 applications for various public facility projects in Lehigh, Northampton, and Monroe Counties.

HUD must now proceed with present fiscal year 1973 appropriations to fund necessary water treatment projects.

A Rooney aide reported the department is presently establishing a priority list of necessary projects in Pennsylvania, taking into account the acute need for water treatment and sewerage development in the Delaware River Basin.

No hints as to where local projects may stand on the reputed priority list are available, the aide said.

Rooney said President Nixon has impounded $500 million in money specifically allocated for water and sewer projects by Congress. The Congressman suggested these should be released soon.

Local governments can retain powers under home rule

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the first in a four-part series on home rule and its possible application in Monroe County.

By MAUREEN RUFE
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — Can local government in Monroe County survive throughout the next decade?

Or, in the next 10 years will it exist merely to carry out the wishes of state or federal governments without any real authority of its own?

According to many political observers, including the League of Women Voters in Pennsylvania, unless local citizens and officials in Monroe County take advantage of Home Rule Act 62 now, municipalities throughout the county and the entire state may face the possibility of losing whatever power and idenity they now have.

"Eventually everything throughout the state will be regionalized," said Mrs. Peter O'Brien, second vice-president of the League of Women Voters of the Stroudsburg. "But if our municipalities take the initiative now, they can act on their own later on."

According to Mrs. O'Brien, who has been working with the new proposal for the past three years, local municipalities who wish to restructure themselves can either draw up a home rule charter or decide to select an alternative form of government.

The home rule charter is actually a mini-constitution that is subject to the laws of the state in the same ways that the state consitution is subject to the laws of the federal government.

The charter describes what powers are being taken over by the municipality and can be amended just like a consititution. A municipality that has adopted a home rule charter may, in fact, do anything which is not expressly denied by the state constitution.

The only exceptions to this rule are the filing and collecting of municipal tax claims, eminent domain, municipal boundary changes, public schools, voter registration and elections, fixing the subjects of taxation, fixing rates of taxation on nonproperty or personal taxes levied on non-residents, assessment of any real or personal property and defining or providing for the punishment of any public misdemeanor.

The other alternative to the drafting of a charter would be for the municipality to decide to adopt one of six suggested optional forms of government. (The voters may also decide to retain their present form of government.)

Before either home rule or an optional plan can be excepted, however, the voters must approve the formation of a government study commission.

Consisting of seven, nine, or 11 members, the commission's job is to compare its local government with other forms available under the laws of the state to decide how the municipality could be strengthened or made more efficient under a new type of government.

Public hearings are held on the subject, a final report of the study is published and a public referendum is held.

The commission may recommend that the referendum be held to let the voters consider an optional plan of government, to consider adopting a home rule charter or to retain the form of government the municipality is currently operating under.

The commission may also decide to make any other recommendation for a referendum that it deems appropriate.

In terms of the first option, which would ask the voters to consider an alternative form of government, the voters would have to decide if another government plan would allow the municipality to operate more efficiently and economically.

Township residents, for example, could decide to operate under one executive official rather than be administered by the present three-man board of supervisors.

The government study commission has a total of nine months to come up with a study on an optional plan of government and an additional three if it is working on a home rule charter.

Under Act 62, counties are considered local municipalities and are allowed to adopt home rule privileges. When asked how this would effect townships and boroughs within that county, Mrs. O'Brien explained.

"With the counties there is a grandfather clause that states that no powers can be taken away that are now being exercised," she said. "Also, however, the individual townships have the right to be excluded from the county's juridiction in a particilar area, if they are already exercising local power on the question."

"Home rule protects the smallest," she continued, "and grandfathers the biggest."

For example, according to Mrs. O'Brien, if the county had its own county police force in operation, a township could decide to be excluded if it is also running its own local force.

If the township would want to have the county take over its force, it would have to pass an ordinance to that effect.

In essence, the municipality, itself, would decide if it wanted to take on the power of administering a local police force. That, in effect, is what home rule is all about; for the first time in almost 200 years, local municipalities in Pennsylvania will finally be able to decide for themselves what powers they want to have.

NEXT: A history of home rule development in Monroe County and the nation is presented to give the reader a basic understanding of the implications of the new law.

In the first case, a 17-year-old Stroudsburg youth, who had pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of narcotics, was placed on probation for a year and permitted to move to a farm in British Columbia, Canada, with two older brothers.

The youth had been arrested earlier this year when he and a companion were parked in front of an off-duty policeman's house and acted suspiciously causing an investigation.

The companion was sentenced earlier this month in a closed door session in Judge Williams' chambers to two years probation with the provision that he undergo psychiatric treatment. It had been his second offense involving narcotics.

In placing the boy on probation, Judge Williams commented that a report from the Allentown State Hospital confirmed the court's suspicion that the youth had emotional problems, and the psychiatrist concurred in the boy's wish to live on the Canadian farm.

In a second juvenile case, a 17-year-old East Stroudsburg youth, charged with burglary of a service station, was placed on probation for a year and granted permission by the court to move to Florida to reside with a friend of his family.

The youth, who had previously been incarcerated at the state correctional institution at Camp Hill, was also ordered to undergo regular psychiatric examination while in Florida.

In a third matter, a 16-year-old Stroudsburg boy, charged with assault and battery against a teacher at Stroudsburg High School, was ordered to the State Forestry Camp, Hickory Run State Park, White Haven until further order of the court.

Judge Williams commented in his disposition of the matter that the psychiatric report on the youth indicated a need for insitutional care to overcome emotional problems.

Special voter registration to be continued for youths

STROUDSBURG — The Monroe County Commissioners will continue the present policy of setting up special registration facilities to attempt to sign-up newly eligible 18-20-year-old voters.

Monroe County Commissioner Mrs. Nancy Shukaitis said registration centers were previously set up in all of the area high schools and at East Stroudsburg State College to enable students to register.

Education Secretary John C. Pittenger had called for centers to be provided for college and high students to register to vote earlier this week, and Mrs. Shukaitis stated the commissioners agree with Pittenger's statement.

"We have been holding special registrations in the past and will continue to do so," said Mrs. Shukaitis.

Mrs. Cherry Rahn, Monroe County registar, had no figures available on the number of 18 to 20 year-olds who had been registered in the drives, but estimated there were "at least 1,500." Last year, in the period from April to June to September, 282 new voters registered, Mrs. Rahn noted.

Pittenger said there are about 185,000 high school students and 300,000 college students within the new 18-20 voting age in the state.

He has asked all school district superintendents, intermediate unit directors and college and university presidents to cooperate with election officials.

"The Supreme Court's ruling which granted 18-20 year-olds the right to vote will have little impact on our system of government if we do not make explicit efforts to help students register and vote," Pittenger said.

"Schools have traditionally considered the development of good citizenship as one of their most important tasks. I can't think of any more direct way to foster responsible citizenship than for schools to get involved first-hand to encourage registration."

Eastburg High to initiate program for 'mini-courses'

BY CONRAD GROVE
Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — Nearly 20 per cent of the students in East Stroudsburg High School will carry between 15 and 18 subjects next year.

The school is initiating a "mini-course" program, offering a wide range of topics in social studies and English, with each course pared to a nine-week session.

"Kids like to get down to the issues and get out," says Cummings Piatt, principal. "We've got to cut out the padding and get down to learning."

At least half of Pennsylvania's schools are experimenting with mini-courses, although educational philosophies and time lengths vary.

But while some schools just threw out attractive course descriptions without sequence to entice students, East Stroudsburg has attempted to structure its program, Piatt notes.

In 10th grade English, for example, a student is required to take one form course, one grammar course, one composition course and one free choice.

Yet for the grammar requirement, the student is free to choose one of four alternatives: Modern Spelling, Developmental Linquistics, Advanced Grammar or Vocational English.

A sophomore student has similar choices in the other two requirements and "free" category. Under the system, up to eight English topics could be carried that year.

While four social studies courses are required yearly, each subject will be non-graded, with sophomores, juniors and seniors enrolled in the course picked.

Ten social studies courses are offered, ranging from Contemporary U.S. Problems to Black History to Free Press in a Free Society to The Dilemna of Welfare.

In 11th and 12 grade English, two free choices are required and topics (10 for juniors and 15 for seniors) again touch on contemporary life, such as Pop Rock Poetry, Ethnic and Social Literature and Filmmaking.

The move represents a push toward the humanities, points out Piatt, as American education is attempting to close the gap created by the science surge in the 1960s.

Coupled with the increased offerings, East Stroudsburg will swing into an eight-period day next year, cutting class length to 40 minutes. A student is required to take seven courses during the day.

Student response has been "just fantastic," says Piatt. "I've had many seniors say they're sorry they missed a shot at this.

"And I'd be more excited about studying Shakespeare if I could choose him for nine weeks rather than a whole year."

The system won't allow lackadasical attitudes by either students or teachers, he contends, as the learning process has to be budgeted within nine weeks.

"If we can accomplish learning by saying let's concentrate for a short time, then we're doing what we should be doing.

"The working world is the same. You've got a job, you've got to study it — and get it done."

Job mart increase reported

STROUDSBURG — Preliminary estimates compiled by the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry, Bureau of Employment Security, indicate that total employment in Monroe County rose more than 2,000 workers in a period from mid-April to mid-June.

Total unemployment in the area is currently calculated at 900, a number which remained constant throughout this period. Despite the significant gain in area employment, due to the hiring of both local and out-of-state persons, unemployment did not decline proportionately because of the number of local new entrants and summer workers seeking area employment.

Total employment in the area rose from to its current level of 25,000, with most gains being registered in manufacturing industries, non-manufacturing industries and the self-employed, unpaid family and domestic workers groups. Agricultural employment remained stable during the two-month period. The gains indicate 1,000 more workers than the 24,000 workers indicated in June 1971.

Nonmaufacturing industries employment, currently placed at 17,000, increased by 1,700 workers since mid-April primarily due to seasonal influences that stimulated hiring in summer hiring in summer camps and resort hotels. A gain of 2,200 workers was recorded in these service industry establishments.

The self-employed, unpaid family and domestic workers group with an estimated 2,400 workers, increased by 200 workers while farm employment remained at 400 workers.

None hurt in truck-cars collision

MIDDLE SMITHFIELD TOWNSHIP — Operators of four vehicles escaped injury Tuesday afternoon in a collision on Rt. 209, Middle Smithfield Township.

State Police at Stroudsburg reported a tractor-trailer driven by Calvin Moyer, Millville, W. Va., was traveling south on Rt. 209, when after descending a grade he was unable to stop and collided with a vehicle operated by Barry Seip, Moyertown, N.J.

Seip's auto then collided head-on with a car driven by Sidney Creager, Waynesboro, Moyer's tractor-trailer collided with the rear of a vehicle operated by Richard Gorton, Bethlehem, demolishing a trailer Gorton's auto was pulling.

Shooting probed

BLAKESLEE — The body of a 22-year-old Kingston man was found in a parking lot near Blakeslee Corners Tuesday morning, with multiple gunshot wounds to the head.

Pennsylvania State Police at Fern Ridge reported the body of Larry Rosenthal was found near his vehicle near Sheiner's Market, Rt. 115, Blakeslee, at about 9:15 a.m. State police suspect the gunshot wounds, from a 20-gauge shotgun, were self-inflicted.

Trooper Ronald Grzyboski and Deputy Coroner William Kresge are conducting an investigation.

Sewer bill defeat blasted by Congressman Rooney

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Rep. Fred Rooney, D-Bethlehem, strongly denounced the recent defeat of a bill which would have accelerated funding for "dozens of pending" water and sewer projects, including an expected future expansion of the sewer plant in East Stroudsburg.

Donald Gage, East Stroudsburg borough manager, said the defeat of the legislation before congress concerning water and sewer projects should not directly affect the borough, since no formal application for funds has been sent to Washington.

"We have only conducted a feasibility study for expanding our sewerage treatment facility, and have not determined the cost or the specific design as of yet," he said.

He pointed out an engineering study will have to be made along with obtaining information from different regulatory agencies.

Gage admitted the defeat of the funding bill might have a future affect on East Stroudsburg's sewerage plans, but stated, "We will have to study the different pieces of legislation before Congress before making any application and deciding anything specific."

According to legislative aides to Rep. Rooney, the defeated water and sewerage funding bill would have authorized the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) to make emergency grants to state and local governments for the construction and expansion of sewerage, water treatment, and other public facilities.

The grants could have covered up to 100 per cent of costs for construction, and the aggregate sum authorized would have been $5 billion.

Rep. Rooney said the bill would also have created employment opportunities for 500,000 people.

"This bill could have represented one of the most significent steps Congress has taken in recent years to assist our local governments with their tremendous development needs," Rooney said.

Opponents of the bill argued on the House floor that this legislation would be inflationary. Several Congressmen questioned said that many application requests for money were overstated.

A House committee recently reported that $12.6 billion worth of water and sewer projects applications are pending, which would include 37 applications for various public facility projects in Lehigh, Northampton, and Monroe Counties.

HUD must now proceed with present fiscal year 1973 appropriations to fund necessary water treatment projects.

A Rooney aide reported the department is presently establishing a priority list of necessary projects in Pennsylvania, taking into account the acute need for water treatment and sewerage development in the Delaware River Basin.

No hints as to where local projects may stand on the reputed priority list are available, the aide said.

Rooney said President Nixon has impounded $500 million in money specifically allocated for water and sewer projects by Congress. The Congressman suggested these should be released soon.

S-burg school registration being conducted daily

STROUDSBURG — New student registration for the Stroudsburg School District is being held daily in the guidance ofice of the high school from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. for students in grades 7 through 12.

Counselors urge all families moving into the district to take advantage of the early registration in order that schedules may be computerized prior to the opening day of school. Counselors will be available to assist with course selections.

Registrations for elementary children will be held after Aug. 14, at the elementary schools.

Further information can be obtained by conducting the Stroudsburg High School.

Local governments can retain powers under home rule

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the first in a four-part series on home rule and its possible application in Monroe County.

By MAUREEN RUFE
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — Can local government in Monroe County survive throughout the next decade?

Or, in the next 10 years will it exist merely to carry out the wishes of state or federal governments without any real authority of its own?

According to many political observers, including the League of Women Voters in Pennsylvania, unless local citizens and officials in Monroe County take advantage of Home Rule Act 62 now, municipalities throughout the county and the entire state may face the possibility of losing whatever power and idenity they now have.

"Eventually everything throughout the state will be regionalized," said Mrs. Peter O'Brien, second vice-president of the League of Women Voters of the Stroudsburg. "But if our municipalities take the initiative now, they can act on their own later on."

According to Mrs. O'Brien, who has been working with the new proposal for the past three years, local municipalities who wish to restructure themselves can either draw up a home rule charter or decide to select an alternative form of government.

The home rule charter is actually a mini-constitution that is subject to the laws of the state in the same ways that the state consitution is subject to the laws of the federal government.

The charter describes what powers are being taken over by the municipality and can be amended just like a consititution. A municipality that has adopted a home rule charter may, in fact, do anything which is not expressly denied by the state constitution.

The only exceptions to this rule are the filing and collecting of municipal tax claims, eminent domain, municipal boundary changes, public schools, voter registration and elections, fixing the subjects of taxation, fixing rates of taxation on nonproperty or personal taxes levied on non-residents, assessment of any real or personal property and defining or providing for the punishment of any public misdemeanor.

The other alternative to the drafting of a charter would be for the municipality to decide to adopt one of six suggested optional forms of government. (The voters may also decide to retain their present form of government.)

Before either home rule or an optional plan can be excepted, however, the voters must approve the formation of a government study commission.

Consisting of seven, nine, or 11 members, the commission's job is to compare its local government with other forms available under the laws of the state to decide how the municipality could be strengthened or made more efficient under a new type of government.

Public hearings are held on the subject, a final report of the study is published and a public referendum is held.

The commission may recommend that the referendum be held to let the voters consider an optional plan of government, to consider adopting a home rule charter or to retain the form of government the municipality is currently operating under.

The commission may also decide to make any other recommendation for a referendum that it deems appropriate.

In terms of the first option, which would ask the voters to consider an alternative form of government, the voters would have to decide if another government plan would allow the municipality to operate more efficiently and economically.

Township residents, for example, could decide to operate under one executive official rather than be administered by the present three-man board of supervisors.

The government study commission has a total of nine months to come up with a study on an optional plan of government and an additional three if it is working on a home rule charter.

Under Act 62, counties are considered local municipalities and are allowed to adopt home rule privileges. When asked how this would effect townships and boroughs within that county, Mrs. O'Brien explained.

"With the counties there is a grandfather clause that states that no powers can be taken away that are now being exercised," she said. "Also, however, the individual townships have the right to be excluded from the county's juridiction in a particilar area, if they are already exercising local power on the question."

"Home rule protects the smallest," she continued, "and grandfathers the biggest."

For example, according to Mrs. O'Brien, if the county had its own county police force in operation, a township could decide to be excluded if it is also running its own local force.

If the township would want to have the county take over its force, it would have to pass an ordinance to that effect.

In essence, the municipality, itself, would decide if it wanted to take on the power of administering a local police force. That, in effect, is what home rule is all about; for the first time in almost 200 years, local municipalities in Pennsylvania will finally be able to decide for themselves what powers they want to have.

Bobby Unser blazes to Schaefer 500 pole mark

By CHUCK FIERSON
Record Sports Editor

LONG POND — Bobby Unser is proof of the old adage "better late than never."

The Albuquerque, N.M., driver drew for the 47th qualification position for Tuesday's time trials for the Schaefer 500 at Pocono International Raceway.

After the track was closed for 2:12 due to rain, qualification attempts were extended one and one-half hours. But when the 7:30 p.m. closing time came, Unser and Mario Andretti were still left to qualify.

But United States Auto Club officials decided to let the pair go out and try for a shot at the pole which Gordon Johncock had held 1:40 with an average speed of 183.457 miles per hour.

Unser promptly went out in the cool Pocono evening and established a track record with a 188.825 on the first lap in his Olsonite Eagle.

But the best was yet to come.

Unser, who had sat on the previous seven straight poles in championship competition, turned 188.897 on his next lap and then drove the fastest two-and-one-half miles ever on the track — 190.210.

He ended with a four-lap average of 189.473 to take the pole for Saturday's race which is to start at 1:30 p.m.

Johncock, Franklin, Ind., had to settle for the middle of the first row despite setting two one-lap records which held until Unser cracked them and the four-lap mark.

Perhaps the most satisfying runs of the day came from the "Super Team" of Parnelli Jones. Just last week defending national champion Joe Leonard had won the first race for the trio of cars when he won the Michigan 200.

Andretti, the 27th qualifier of the day, averaged 183.212 in his Viceroy Special to sit on the outside of the first row. Al Unser, who had sat in the first row for a while, finally ended on the inside of the second row with a 182.981 average run.

Leonard, the third member of the "Super Team," is on the outside of the second row with an average of 181.646. Sandwiched between Al Unser and Leonard is Gary Bettenhausen, who turned a 182.766.

Young Steve Krisiloff, the Parsippany, N.J., driver who improves with each race, is on the outside of the third row with a 180.951 qualification run. Lloyd Ruby, Wichita Falls, Tex., had a 179.248 and veteran Roger McCluskey, Tucson, Ariz., 178.434 to fill out the row.

Leading the fourth row is John Mahler, who qualified with a 178.141. Rick Muther had a 177.342 and Salt Walther 177.187 to fill out the fourth row. In the fifth row will be Johnny Rutherford with a 176.872, Sam Posey who had a 176.777 and Wally Dallenbach with a 176.694.

Dallenbach, driving the STP Oil Treatment Special, had spun out into the infield during morning practice sessions, but the car received no apparent damage.

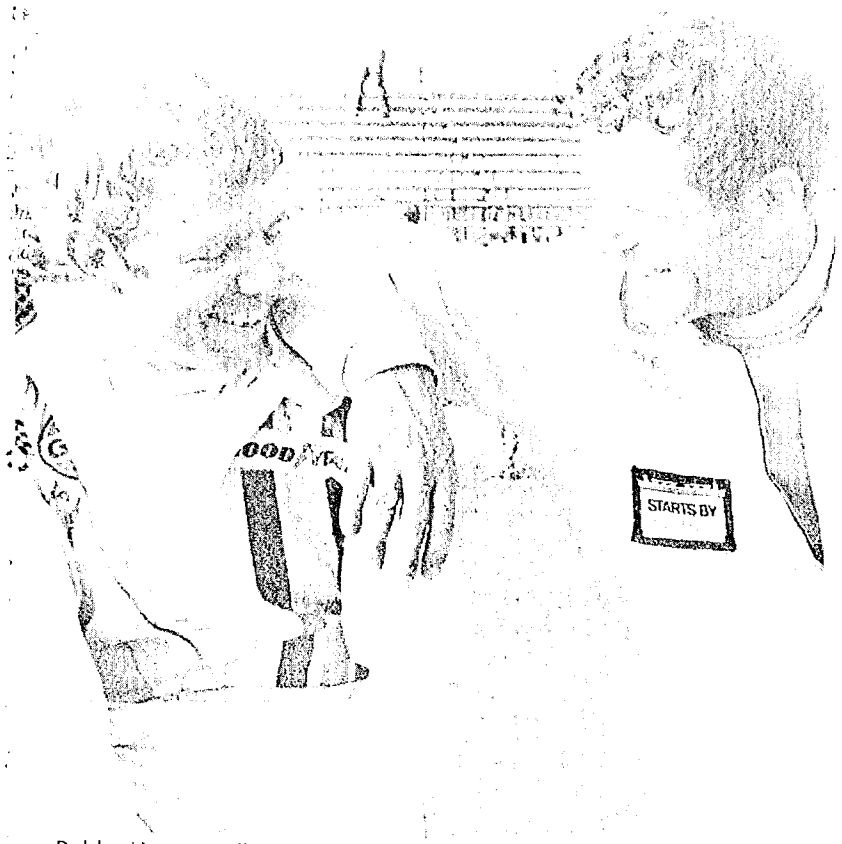

Heading the sixth row will be rookie Mike Hiss, who averaged 175.975. Lee Kunzman, another rookie, had a 175.940 and Jimmy Caruthers a 175.584 to fill out the all-rookie sixth row.

In the eighth row is Dick Simon with a 174.412, Bob Harkey with a 173.001 and Jerry Karl with a 172.884.

All 24 drivers bettered Mark Donohue's official four-lap record of 172.393 set during qualifications last year.

Rounding out the 27 drivers who qualified Tuesday are Mel Kenyon (171.490), Jim McElreath (170.496) and Al Loquasto (165.207).

Bobby Unser is all smiles as he talks with Gordon Johncock. Johncock held pole for Schaefer 500 until Unser made his record run.

Morgan's 10th-inning single gives N.L. 4-3 victory

ATLANTA (UPI)—Joe Morgan, the spunky second baseman who was traded this year from Houston to Cincinnati, came through with a clutch 10th inning hit Tuesday night to give the National League a 4-3 victory over the American League in the first major league All-Star baseball game ever played in the South.

Morgan, one of only two National Leaguers to play the entire game, had played a sparkling game afield but had gone hitless until he came up in the bottom of the 10th with Nate Colbert of San Diego on second base, one out, and the score tied at 3-3.

He drove the ball deep into the alley in right centerfield on a 2-2 pitch off Baltimore's Dave McNally. The hit could have been an easy double but Morgan pulled up just past first after Colbert raced across with the run that gave the National League its 13th victory in the last 15 All-Star games.

Kansas City's Cookie Rojas, pinch-hitting for starter Rod Carew of the Twins, had put the American League in front with a two-run homer in the top of the eighth after Atlanta's Hank Aaron had given the National League a 2-1 lead in the bottom of the sixth with a two-run homer of his own.

Aaron, baseball's leading living home run hitter with a career total of 659, was given a standing ovation by the partisan, standing-room-only crowd of 53,107 when he got the National its first runs with a drive that barely cleared the left field fence.

Rojas' homer was also to left and almost was caught by Chicago's Billy Williams.

Morgan, who flied out, bounced out, and walked his first three at-bats, was named the game's "Most Valuable Player" with Aaron, who was taken out in the seventh, named runnerup.

This was the third time that Morgan has been picked as a starter for the All-Star game and National League manager Danny Murtaugh elected to leave him and Houston's Lee May, who was involved in the trade that sent Morgan to the Reds, in for the entire game.

Lefthander Tug McGraw of the New York Mets worked the last two innings to get credit for the victory and struck out four batters in that stretch—three of those in the ninth inning.

May kept the National League alive when he drove in the tying run in the bottom of the ninth after it appeared Rojas had won it with his homer.

Down 3-2, Chicago's Billy Williams led off the National ninth with a single and raced to third on a following single by Pittsburgh's Manny Sanguillen. May then bounced into a forceout that allowed Williams to streak home with the tying run.

The American League pitchers held the power-laden National League well in check through the first five innings with Baltimore's Jim Palmer and Detroit's 17-game winner Mickey Lolich going three and two scoreless innings respectively.

Detroit's Bill Freehan slides safely under Johnny Bench to score the first run for the American League in the third inning. National League rallied to score a 4-3 victory in the 10th inning. (UPI Wirephoto)

The American League had no better fortune during the two innings National starter Bob Gibson was in the game but got to Steve Blass of Pittsburgh in the third inning with just one hit.

Blass walked Bill Freehan of Detroit to open the inning and Palmer sacrificed him to second. Rod Carew of Minnesota followed with a single, scoring Freehan with the game's first run.

That's where it stood until the last of the sixth when Cesar Cedeno of Houston singled with two out and Aaron, facing former National Leaguer Gaylord Perry, now of Cleveland, hit his second All-Star homer of the past two years.

"That one had to be one of the most exciting," Aaron said. "Playing before my home fans, especially fans who had given me such a fine reception, it was really something. I've hit a lot of home runs in my career but that has to be one of my best."

Aaron hit his 600th career homer off Perry last year when the lanky righthander was with the San Francisco Giants.

"I hit a spitter for the home run," Aaron said, grinning. "It wasn't his best spitter, but it was a spitter."

American League manager Earl Weaver of Baltimore said he almost didn't get Rojas into the game. "I told Cookie that I would try to get him in but I hoped he wouldn't be too upset if he didn't make it."

The chance for Rojas came after pinch hitter Reggie Smith had struck out to give the American League, then down 2-1, a last-out chance in the eighth inning with Rojas batting against Montreal's Bill Stoneman.

"I'm no Hank Aaron," said Rojas who has hit only two home runs to Aaron's 20 in regular season play this year. "It had to be my biggest ever thrill."

McGraw, appearing in his first All-Star game, was one of two relief pitchers picked by Murtaugh for this game. Weaver had only starters on his nine-man staff.

The crowd of 53,107 was the largest baseball crowd ever in Atlanta Stadium and the host Atlanta Braves said they returned more than 19,000 orders for tickets, many of those asking for up to four tickets.

The victory gave the National League, which lost 6-4 last year in Detroit, a 24-18-1 edge in All-Star play. Next year's game will be played in Kansas City.

McGraw was 'nervous;' Aaron 'hit spitball'

ATLANTA (UPI)—Tug McGraw of the New York Mets, whose only other appearance in an All-Star game was for batting practice, said Tuesday night he was nervous from the start but psyched himself out of it to become the National League's winning pitcher.

"I don't think I normally get nervous," McGraw said, "but when they announced (Hank) Aaron and (Willie) Mays and I heard the crowd, I was nervous from then on."

The 26-year-old Met relief ace was one of a trio of stars for the winning National Leaguers, with hometown hero Hank Aaron of the Atlanta Braves walloping a two-run homer to give them a temporary 2-1 lead and second baseman Joe Morgan of the Cincinnati Reds driving in the winning run in the 10th inning.

McGraw, who came on in the ninth to pitch two scoreless innings, including striking out four of the first five batters he faced, said he talked himself out of nervousness.

"I told myself the only reason a guy gets nervous is because he is afraid," the lefthander said. "I'm not afraid. I took myself on a confidence trip."

Aaron received a standing ovation from the crowd when he took the field. The applause and cheers were even louder when he parked a pitch by Gaylord Perry of the Cleveland Indians over the left field fence 375 feet from home plate with Houston's Cesar Cedeno on base.

He said Perry threw him a spitball. "It wasn't one of his best spitters but it was a spitter," said the smiling home run king.

"He kept his back to me but I knew he was going to throw a spitball. I batted against him for 10 years. I knew what he was going to throw."

It was Morgan's third All-Star game and his game-winning single to right center brought in San Diego's Nate Colbert from second after he had walked and moved up a base on a sacrifice.

Morgan, a stocky-lefthanded swinger who fielded flawlessly for 10 innings, said he thought Baltimore's Dave McNally threw him a high slider or some "breaking ball."

"I just look for the ball," Morgan said. "A lefthander is kind of tough. I just look for what I can hit."

Tournament set

MARSHALLS CREEK — Members of Mountain Manor Golf Club will compete for the President's Cup Sunday. Men will tee off at 11 a.m., followed by women at 12:30 p.m.

Franco inks Steeler pact

LATROBE, Pa. (UPI)—The Pittsburgh Steelers announced Tuesday they had signed their No. 1 draft choice, running back Franco Harris, to a multi-year contract.

A Steelers' spokesman said the agreement was reached in Evanston, Ill., where Harris is working out with the College All-Stars for Friday night's game with the Dallas Cowboys.

The former Penn State star said he planned to report to the Steeler camp Saturday.

Bobby Unser blazes to Schaefer 500 pole mark

By CHUCK FIERSON
Record Sports Editor

LONG POND — Bobby Unser is proof of the old adage "better late than never."

The Albuquerque, N.M., driver drew for the 47th qualification position for Tuesday's time trials for the Schaefer 500 at Pocono International Raceway.

After the track was closed for 2:12 due to rain, qualification attempts were extended one and one-half hours. But when the 7:30 p.m. closing time came, Unser and Mario Andretti were still left to qualify.

But United States Auto Club officials decided to let the pair go out and try for a shot at the pole which Gordon Johncock had held 1:40 with an average speed of 183.457 miles per hour.

Unser promptly went out in the cool Pocono evening and established a track record with a 188.825 on the first lap in his Olsonite Eagle.

But the best was yet to come.

Unser, who had sat on the previous seven straight poles in championship competition, turned 188.897 on his next lap and then drove the fastest two-and-one-half miles ever on the track — 190.210.

He ended with a four-lap average of 189.473 to take the pole for Saturday's race which is to start at 1:30 p.m.

Johncock, Franklin, Ind., had to settle for the middle of the first row despite setting two one-lap records which held until Unser cracked them and the four-lap mark.

Perhaps the most satisfying runs of the day came from the "Super Team" of Parnelli Jones. Just last week defending national champion Joe Leonard had won the first race for the trio of cars when he won the Michigan 200.

Andretti, the 27th qualifier of the day, averaged 183.212 in his Viceroy Special to sit on the outside of the first row. Al Unser, who had sat in the first row for a while, finally ended on the inside of the second row with a 182.981 average run.

Leonard, the third member of the "Super Team," is on the outside of the second row with an average of 181.646. Sandwiched between Al Unser and Leonard is Gary Bettenhausen, who turned a 182.766.

Young Steve Krisiloff, the Parsippany, N.J., driver who improves with each race, is on the outside of the third row with a 180.951 qualification run. Lloyd Ruby, Wichita Falls, Tex., had a 179.248 and veteran Roger McCluskey, Tucson, Ariz., 178.434 to fill out the row.

Leading the fourth row is John Mahler, who qualified with a 178.141. Rick Muther had a 177.342 and Salt Walther 177.187 to fill out the fourth row. In the fifth row will be Johnny Rutherford with a 176.872, Sam Posey who had a 176.777 and Wally Dallenbach with a 176.694.

Dallenbach, driving the STP Oil Treatment Special, had spun out into the infield during morning practice sessions, but the car received no apparent damage.

Heading the sixth row will be rookie Mike Hiss, who averaged 175.975. Lee Kunzman, another rookie, had a 175.940 and Jimmy Caruthers a 175.584 to fill out the all-rookie sixth row.

In the eighth row is Dick Simon with a 174.412, Bob Harkey with a 173.001 and Jerry Karl with a 172.884.

All 24 drivers bettered Mark Donohue's official four-lap record of 172.393 set during qualifications last year.

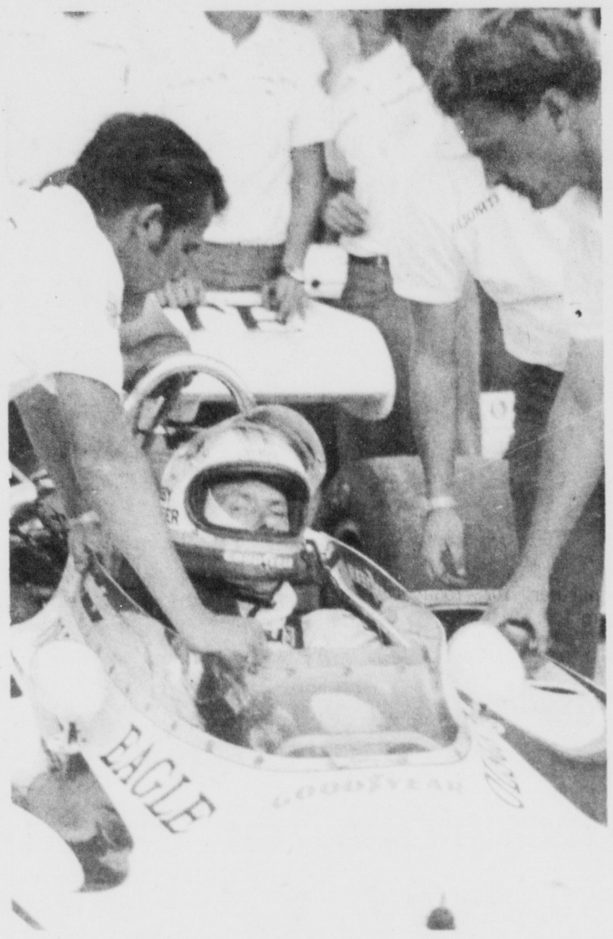

Rounding out the 27 drivers who qualified Tuesday are Mel Kenyon (171.490), Jim McElreath (170.496) and Al Loquasto (165.207).

Bobby Unser is all smiles as he talks with Gordon Johncock. Johncock held pole for Schaefer 500 until Unser made his record run.

Morgan's 10th-inning single gives N.L. 4-3 victory

ATLANTA (UPI)—Joe Morgan, the spunky second baseman who was traded this year from Houston to Cincinnati, came through with a clutch 10th inning hit Tuesday night to give the National League a 4-3 victory over the American League in the first major league All-Star baseball game ever played in the South.

Morgan, one of only two National Leaguers to play the entire game, had played a sparkling game afield but had gone hitless until he came up in the bottom of the 10th with Nate Colbert of San Diego on second base, one out, and the score tied at 3-3.

He drove the ball deep into the alley in right centerfield on a 2-2 pitch off Baltimore's Dave McNally. The hit could have been an easy double but Morgan pulled up just past first after Colbert raced across with the run that gave the National League its 13th victory in the last 15 All-Star games.

Kansas City's Cookie Rojas, pinch-hitting for starter Rod Carew of the Twins, had put the American League in front with a two-run homer in the top of the eighth after Atlanta's Hank Aaron had given the National League a 2-1 lead in the bottom of the sixth with a two-run homer of his own.

Aaron, baseball's leading living home run hitter with a career total of 659, was given a standing ovation by the partisan, standing-room-only crowd of 53,107 when he got the National its first runs with a drive that barely cleared the left field fence.

Rojas' homer was also to left and almost was caught by Chicago's Billy Williams.

Morgan, who flied out, bounced out, and walked his first three at-bats, was named the game's "Most Valuable Player" with Aaron, who was taken out in the seventh, named runnerup.

This was the third time that Morgan has been picked as a starter for the All-Star game and National League manager Danny Murtaugh elected to leave him and Houston's Lee May, who was involved in the trade that sent Morgan to the Reds, in for the entire game.

Lefthander Tug McGraw of the New York Mets worked the last two innings to get credit for the victory and struck out four batters in that stretch—three of those in the ninth inning.

May kept the National League alive when he drove in the tying run in the bottom of the ninth after it appeared Rojas had won it with his homer.

Down 3-2, Chicago's Billy Williams led off the National ninth with a single and raced to third on a following single by Pittsburgh's Manny Sanguillen. May then bounced into a forceout that allowed Williams to streak home with the tying run.

The American League pitchers held the power-laden National League well in check through the first five innings with Baltimore's Jim Palmer and Detroit's 17-game winner Mickey Lolich going three and two scoreless innings respectively.

Detroit's Bill Freehan slides safely under Johnny Bench to score the first run for the American League in the third inning. National League rallied to score a 4-3 victory in the 10th inning. (UPI Wirephoto)

The American League had no better fortune during the two innings National starter Bob Gibson was in the game but got to Steve Blass of Pittsburgh in the third inning with just one hit.

Blass walked Bill Freehan of Detroit to open the inning and Palmer sacrificed him to second. Rod Carew of Minnesota followed with a single, scoring Freehan with the game's first run.

That's where it stood until the last of the sixth when Cesar Cedeno of Houston singled with two out and Aaron, facing former National Leaguer Gaylord Perry, now of Cleveland, hit his second All-Star homer of the past two years.

"That one had to be one of the most exciting," Aaron said. "Playing before my home fans, especially fans who had given me such a fine reception, it was really something. I've hit a lot of home runs in my career but that has to be one of my best."

Aaron hit his 600th career homer off Perry last year when the lanky righthander was with the San Francisco Giants.

"I hit a spitter for the home run," Aaron said, grinning. "It wasn't his best spitter, but it was a spitter."

American League manager Earl Weaver of Baltimore said he almost didn't get Rojas into the game. "I told Cookie that I would try to get him in but I hoped he wouldn't be too upset if he didn't make it."

The chance for Rojas came after pinch hitter Reggie Smith had struck out to give the American League, then down 2-1, a last-out chance in the eighth inning with Rojas batting against Montreal's Bill Stoneman.

"I'm no Hank Aaron," said Rojas who has hit only two home runs to Aaron's 20 in regular season play this year. "It had to be my biggest ever thrill."

McGraw, appearing in his first All-Star game, was one of two relief pitchers picked by Murtaugh for this game. Weaver had only starters on his nine-man staff.

The crowd of 53,107 was the largest baseball crowd ever in Atlanta Stadium and the host Atlanta Braves said they returned more than 19,000 orders for tickets, many of those asking for up to four tickets.

The victory gave the National League, which lost 6-4 last year in Detroit, a 24-18-1 edge in All-Star play. Next year's game will be played in Kansas City.

McGraw was 'nervous;' Aaron 'hit spitball'

ATLANTA (UPI)—Tug McGraw of the New York Mets, whose only other appearance in an All-Star game was for batting practice, said Tuesday night he was nervous from the start but psyched himself out of it to become the National League's winning pitcher.

"I don't think I normally get nervous," McGraw said, "but when they announced (Hank) Aaron and (Willie) Mays and I heard the crowd, I was nervous from then on."

The 26-year-old Met relief ace was one of a trio of stars for the winning National Leaguers, with hometown hero Hank Aaron of the Atlanta Braves walloping a two-run homer to give them a temporary 2-1 lead and second baseman Joe Morgan of the Cincinnati Reds driving in the winning run in the 10th inning.

McGraw, who came on in the ninth to pitch two scoreless innings, including striking out four of the first five batters he faced, said he talked himself out of nervousness.

"I told myself the only reason a guy gets nervous is because he is afraid," the lefthander said. "I'm not afraid. I took myself on a confidence trip."

Aaron received a standing ovation from the crowd when he took the field. The applause and cheers were even louder when he parked a pitch by Gaylord Perry of the Cleveland Indians over the left field fence 375 feet from home plate with Houston's Cesar Cedeno on base.

He said Perry threw him a spitball. "It wasn't one of his best spitters but it was a spitter," said the smiling home run king.

"He kept his back to me but I knew he was going to throw a spitball. I batted against him for 10 years. I knew what he was going to throw."

It was Morgan's third All-Star game and his game-winning single to right center brought in San Diego's Nate Colbert from second after he had walked and moved up a base on a sacrifice.

Morgan, a stocky lefthanded swinger who fielded flawlessly for 10 innings, said he thought Baltimore's Dave McNally threw him a high slider or some "breaking ball."

"I just look for the ball," Morgan said. "A lefthander is kind of tough. I just look for what I can hit."

On welfare, owned 7 race horses

WASHINGTON (UPI) —An attractive Union City, N. J., woman testified Tuesday that she received unemployment payments during part of the time she was listed as owner of seven race horses valued at about $150,000.

Miss Toni Menzella, 29, maintained she knew nothing about the business deals arranged by her late father who was ill with Parkinson's disease and "wanted to try and make some money" to leave his daughter and wife.

"Before he died," Miss Menzella said her father, James, "told me he sold the horses and he lost the money and that was the end of it."

Asked by Chairman Claude Pepper, D-Fla., of the House Crime Committee if she knew there were rules aimed at preventing hidden ownership of horses, Miss Menzella said "I don't now a thing about racing or their regulations."

She said she only acted as a "nominee" for her father, a furniture refinisher, during 1970 and 1971 while working as a dental assistant and collecting unemployment insurance when she was out of work.

Following Miss Menzella's testimony, Robert Presti of Fort Lee, N.J., also known as Ralph Libutti of Long Island, N. Y., and Muttontown, N.J., told how he acted as a broker in behalf of his uncle, James Menzella.

Presti said the girl had "absolutely nothing to do" with the business arrangements and served only as her father's "nominee" because Menzella was incapacitated by his disease and had difficulty signing checks.

However, during a recess in the hearing, Committee Counsel Joseph A. Phillips said the testimony pointed up the need for federal legislation to prevent use of "fronts" to purchase horses or for persons to falsely assert that they were horse owners.

Presti said Menzella put up about $12,000 to begin the purchases on time payments to Ralph Wilson, a horse stable owner and owner of the Buffalo Bills professional football team.

At one point, Presti said, Menzella put down $10,000 for Running Bear, Strider and Change of Scenery with $70,000 owed in $10,000 monthly payments. As the payments came due, Menzella was forced to begin selling horses until in the end he was out of money, including his original $12,000.

According to committee records, Menzella's daughter Toni was also listed as the owner of Fleet Lord, Pax en Terra, Run For Candy and Jack Teel. The stable was called Buck Chance.

In rambling testimony, Presti told how he had had $750,000 in horse deals with Wilson and that he once bought Jim French, who placed second in the 1971 Kentucky Derby, from Wilson for $60,000 and then sold him for $1 million, of which he controlled $700,000.

Presti, whose name did not appear on the foal certificates when he purchased Jim French from Wilson, estimated that 50 per cent of stakes horses are held by nominees for another owner.

Durocher's demise due to Cub 'prima donnas'

CHICAGO (UPI)—Philip K. Wrigley, owner of the Chicago Cubs, said Tuesday Leo Durocher hit the dirt as manager because some of his players are "prima donnas."

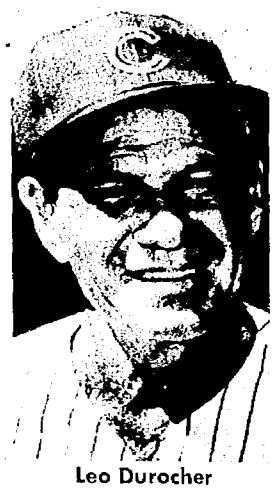

"I don't think they've been earning their pay," Wrigley said. "They don't have the spark of determination. Leo put that into them when he first came here.

"But now they're prima donnas, stars, sensations. Like the Mets. They were sensations one year and now they still haven't come back."

The Cubs organization announced Monday night from Atlanta that Durocher had "resigned" and would be replaced by Carroll "Whitey" Lockman, director of player personnel and an assistant to Cubs Vice President and General Manager John Holland.

"You know," Wrigley said, "few people can stand prosperity than adversity ... I've been around a half a century (in baseball) and it's history repeating itself. You shift and maneuver as best you can."

When asked why he wasn't shifting some of his players, Wrigley said, "I guess you know the most hazardous job is the manager's. They're (the players) using him as an alibi. It's easier to replace the manager than 25 players."

Leo Durocher

Durocher, 66 years old Tuesday, has been a center of controversy since he came to the Cubs in 1966—though at first he had most of the players with him. Reports of friction between him and team reportedly caused Wrigley almost to release him at the end of last season.

Wrigley said Durocher was being retained as a special consultant for the Cubs because "I want him to attend the home games--I don't want him to go on the road—to see the team from the grandstand, to see what's wrong To give it that look as a judge of horseflesh, you might say."

Through Monday night, the Cubs—with one of the highest payrolls in baseball—were in fourth place in the eastern division of the National League, barely over .500 ball with a 46-44 record.

"It ought to be doing a lot better," Wrigley said. "The players aren't as good as they think they are."

Wrigley said Lockman didn't want to be manager. "Oh, God no. Just to sweeten it I made him a vice president and we assured him that he won't have to take it beyond the season."

Wrigley noted he'd probably need another manager, then, for next season.

"Either that or Leo will be back. We'll see."

Nicklaus will miss Pro-Am

LIGONIER, Pa. (UPI)—Jack Nicklaus announced Tuesday he was going to pass up the pro-am portion of the PGA Team Championship today at Laurel Valley Golf Club because of an infected finger on his right hand.

Nicklaus said his physician had advised him to rest his hand as much as possible.

Nicklaus, who was paired with Arnold Palmer, comedian Bob Hope and Burt Gookin, president of the H. J. Heinz Co., told Palmer to find another partner for today's 18-hole match.

Nicklaus said he was planning to play in the team championships opening Thursday. A spokesman for the Columbus, Ohio, golfer said the forefinger of Nicklaus' right hand was badly swollen.

It was not disclosed how Nicklaus suffered the injury.

Lee Trevino went to Cincinnati Tuesday to fill in for Nicklaus in an exhibition match at Cincinnati.

Anyone for a ride?

Youth sets records in contests

ATLANTA (UPI)—Richard McIntyre, 12, of Cranston, R. I., accumulated 430 points, the highest of any contestant, to win his age group in the national Pitch, Hit and Throw contest held before the annual All-Star baseball game.

McIntyre, representing the New York Mets of the National League, defeated the American League champion, Dan McKay of West St. Paul, Minn., representing the Minnesota Twins. McKay had 361 points.

In the 11-year-old category, Larry Anthony, Monroe, La., representing the Houston Astros, had 399 points, beating Jim Demmel, Omaha, Neb., representing the Kansas City Royals of the American League, with 304 points.

In the 10-year-old group, the American League's Larry Smulowitz of Kingston, Pa., representing the Chicago White Sox, had 350 points, defeating the National League champion, Wesley Giles, Sanford, N. C., representing the Atlanta Braves, with 231 points.

Jeff Hornacek, North Riverside, Ill., got 379 points to win the 9-year-old category for the American League's Chicago White Sox, defeating Steven Evans, Springfield, Ohio, representing the Cincinnati Reds, with 264 points.

The eight contestants became finalists by compiling the most points in accuracy and distance in the categories of pitching, hitting and throwing. The boys previously had won local and district competitions.

Newcombe, Okker advance

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI)—Top-seeded John Newcombe and defending champion Tom Okker advanced Tuesday from first-round matches of the $50,000 First National Tennis Classic.

Newcombe blended a devastating serve with accurate placements to subdue fellow Australian Phil Dent 6-3, 6-3, after falling behind 3-1 in the first set.

Okker, a tireless retriever, whipped Brian Fairlie of New Zealand 7-5, 6-1.

Left-hander Tony Roche, winner of the Washington Star International Tournament last Sunday, defeated Roy Barth, 6-3, 6-3.

In other first-round matches, Mark Cox downed Ray Ruffels 7-4, 6-1; Marty Riessen conquered Terry Addison 7-5, 6-0; and Charles Pasarell won over Bob Carmichael 6-4, 2-6, 6-4.

Giants drop five players

WEST LONG BRANCH, N.J.(UPI) — The New York Giants today dropped five players from their roster, leaving their list at 69 with 66 in camp.

Dismissed were Ernie Altimirano, a center from C.W. Post who was a free agent; Skip Butler, a kicker who had been signed by the Giants in mid-season of 1971 after his release by the New Orleans Saints; Tim Delaney, a wide receiver from San Diego State; Neovia Greyer, a defensive back from Wisconsin who was the 16th draft pick, and Paul Rogers, a kicker from Nebraska who was a free agent.

Bulls sold to Chicago syndicate

CHICAGO (UPI)—Owners of the Chicago Bulls voted Tuesday to sell the National Basketball Association team to a syndicate of Chicago bidders.

A brief statement said the owners unanimously accepted an offer to purchase from a group headed by Joe Cook, which also includes Lester Crown, Arthur Wirtz and Phil Klutznick.

The board of governors of the NBA will be asked to approve the sale next Friday.

It was expected the transfer of the franchise would be approved. The board of governors previously rejected the sale of the club to another group headed by Marvin Fishman. Rejection was based on the fact that this group had no arena available to play and after it made arrangements for the Bulls to play in the Amphitheatre, approval again was denied.

The Cook organization has a 10-year contract for the team to play in the Chicago Stadium, owned by Wirtz.

Chamberlain, Lakers having $$ problems

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Wilt Chamberlain wants more money but claims he's getting the cold shoulder from Jack Kent Cooke, owner of the Los Angeles Lakers.

Chamberlain and his lawyer, Seymour S. Goldberg, took their case to the news media Tuesday, complaining Cooke refuses to sit down and talk money with the big center who helped the Lakers in no small way to win the National Basketball Association championships last spring.

Goldberg pointed out in a "news release" that Chamberlain entered into a two-year contract with the Lakers in the latter part of August 1971 when there was a freeze on both wages and prices.

Now, with the freeze thawed, the Lakers have raised their ticket prices by 50 cents a copy for the 1972-73 season.

Goldberg said Chamberlain and he have asked in writing and in a telephone call to talk with Cooke about "appropriate contract readjustments" (a raise) for the 1972-73 season but get no response from the owner nor from the Laker general manager Pete Newell.

The last paragraph of the Goldberg-Chamberlain communique hinted darkly the 7-foot-2-inch Chamberlain may be able to make a better living some place else, saying:

"When, in fact, we do receive a response to our request and understand Mr. Cooke's position more fully, Mr. Chamberlain will then be in a better position to evaluate the many other offers made to him, outside of basketball, for the next season."

Lilly explains Dallas success

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (UPI)—One of the members of the world champion Dallas Cowboys believes the club has reached its current level of success because of an attitude change in Coach Tom Landry.

Bob Lilly, the Cowboys mountainous defensive tackle, thinks Dallas began its push to the top when Landry stopped "pushing himself to the limit, mentally and physically, working 20 hours a day."

The Cowboys open the pro football season Friday night in Chicago against the College All-Stars.

It is not hard to spot the point where the Dallas club began to be a Super Bowl threat. It came the week after the Cowboys had been decimated by St. Louis, 38-0, in the middle of the 1970 season.

Since then the Cowboys have won 27 games (including preseason and playoffs) and lost four.

"We'd proved we were capable of being in the playoffs," Lilly said in an interiew with Frank Luksa of the Dallas Times Herald. "But everyone always belittled the Eastern Division.

"Football publications had written us off as losers. This was after we had lost to Cleveland (in the playoffs for the second straight season in 1969).

"I think Coach Landry, because of this, sort of pushed himself to the limit, mentally and physically, working 20 hours a day. He was trying to make everything perfect, to overcome the damage done mentally.

"After the St. Louis game (which dropped the Cowboys two games behind the Cardinals in the division standings) the pressure was removed. We were written off.

"The next week we played a loose defensive game. As we won one or two more we got our confidence back.

"At this time Landry was still in control, but he let the assistants use more of their ideas. Before, he was in every meeting. In one, he told us about defense; then he told them on offense, then he was in the quarterback meetings and the linebacker meetings.

Cardinals make roster changes

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI)—The St. Louis Cardinals recalled pitcher Ray Bare from their Tulsa farm club and outfielder Jorge Rogue from their Arkansas club, General Manager Bing Devine announced Tuesday.

Bare, a 23-year-old righthanded relief pitcher, will replace Lowell Palmer who is serving a two-week Army Reserve commitment.

A native of Puerto Rico, Rogue, 22, will replace outfielder Brant Alyea on the 25-man roster.

Bare and Rogue will join the club in time for a workout today at Busch Stadium and accompany the Cardinals to Montreal and Chicago.

On welfare, owned 7 race horses

WASHINGTON (UPI) —An attractive Union City, N. J., woman testified Tuesday that she received unemployment payments during part of the time she was listed as owner of seven race horses valued at about $150,000.

Miss Toni Menzella, 29, maintained she knew nothing about the business deals arranged by her late father who was ill with Parkinson's disease and "wanted to try and make some money" to leave his daughter and wife.

"Before he died," Miss Menzella said her father, James, "told me he sold the horses and he lost the money and that was the end of it."

Asked by Chairman Claude Pepper, D-Fla., of the House Crime Committee if she knew there were rules aimed at preventing hidden ownership of horses, Miss Menzella said "I don't now a thing about racing or their regulations."

She said she only acted as a "nominee" for her father, a furniture refinisher, during 1970 and 1971 while working as a dental assistant and collecting unemployment insurance when she was out of work.

Following Miss Menzella's testimony, Robert Presti of Fort Lee, N.J., also known as Ralph Libutti of Long Island, N. Y., and Muttontown, N.J., told how he acted as a broker in behalf of his uncle, James Menzella.

Presti said the girl had "absolutely nothing to do" with the business arrangements and served only as her father's "nominee" because Menzella was incapacitated by his disease and had difficulty signing checks.

However, during a recess in the hearing, Committee Counsel Joseph A. Phillips said the testimony pointed up the need for federal legislation to prevent use of "fronts" to purchase horses or for persons to falsely assert that they were horse owners.

Presti said Menzella put up about $12,000 to begin the purchases on time payments to Ralph Wilson, a horse stable owner and owner of the Buffalo Bills professional football team.

At one point, Presti said, Menzella put down $10,000 for Running Bear, Strider and Change of Scenery with $70,000 owed in $10,000 monthly payments. As the payments came due, Menzella was forced to begin selling horses until in the end he was out of money, including his original $12,000.

According to committee records, Menzella's daughter Toni was also listed as the owner of Fleet Lord, Pax en Terra, Run For Candy and Jack Teel. The stable was called Buck Chance.

In rambling testimony, Presti told how he had had $750,000 in horse deals with Wilson and that he once bought Jim French, who placed second in the 1971 Kentucky Derby, from Wilson for $60,000 and then sold him for $1 million, of which he controlled $700,000.

Presti, whose name did not appear on the foal certificates when he purchased Jim French from Wilson, estimated that 50 per cent of stakes horses are held by nominees for another owner.

Durocher's demise due to Cub 'prima donnas'

CHICAGO (UPI)—Philip K. Wrigley, owner of the Chicago Cubs, said Tuesday Leo Durocher hit the dirt as manager because some of his players are "prima donnas."

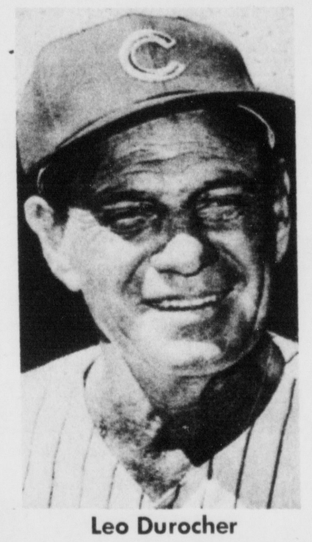

"I don't think they've been earning their pay," Wrigley said. "They don't have the spark of determination. Leo put that into them when he first came here.

"But now they're prima donnas, stars, sensations. Like the Mets. They were sensations one year and now they still haven't come back."

The Cubs organization announced Monday night from Atlanta that Durocher had "resigned" and would be replaced by Carroll "Whitey" Lockman, director of player personnel and an assistant to Cubs Vice President and General Manager John Holland.

"You know," Wrigley said, "few people can stand prosperity than adversity ... I've been around a half a century (in baseball) and it's history repeating itself. You shift and maneuver as best you can."

When asked why he wasn't shifting some of his players, Wrigley said, "I guess you know the most hazardous job is the manager's. They're (the players) using him as an alibi. It's easier to replace the manager than 25 players."

Leo Durocher

Durocher, 66 years old Tuesday, has been a center of controversy since he came to the Cubs in 1966—though at first he had most of the players with him. Reports of friction between him and team reportedly caused Wrigley almost to release him at the end of last season.

Wrigley said Durocher was being retained as a special consultant for the Cubs because "I want him to attend the home games—I don't want him to go on the road—to see the team from the grandstand, to see what's wrong To give it that look as a judge of horseflesh, you might say."

Through Monday night, the Cubs—with one of the highest payrolls in baseball—were in fourth place in the eastern division of the National League, barely over .500 ball with a 46-44 record.

"It ought to be doing a lot better," Wrigley said. "The players aren't as good as they think they are."

Wrigley said Lockman didn't want to be manager. "Oh, God no. Just to sweeten it I made him a vice president and we assured him that he won't have to take it beyond the season."

Wrigley noted he'd probably need another manager, then, for next season.

"Either that or Leo will be back. We'll see."

Nicklaus will miss Pro-Am

LIGONIER, Pa. (UPI)—Jack Nicklaus announced Tuesday he was going to pass up the pro-am portion of the PGA Team Championship today at Laurel Valley Golf Club because of an infected finger on his right hand.

Nicklaus said his physician had advised him to rest his hand as much as possible.

Nicklaus, who was paired with Arnold Palmer, comedian Bob Hope and Burt Gookin, president of the H. J. Heinz Co., told Palmer to find another partner for today's 18-hole match.

Nicklaus said he was planning to play in the team championships opening Thursday. A spokesman for the Columbus, Ohio, golfer said the forefinger of Nicklaus' right hand was badly swollen.

It was not disclosed how Nicklaus suffered the injury.

Lee Trevino went to Cincinnati Tuesday to fill in for Nicklaus in an exhibition match at Cincinnati.

Youth sets records in contests

ATLANTA (UPI)—Richard McIntyre, 12, of Cranston, R. I., accumulated 430 points, the highest of any contestant, to win his age group in the national Pitch, Hit and Throw contest held before the annual All-Star baseball game.

McIntyre, representing the New York Mets of the National League, defeated the American League champion, Dan McKay of West St. Paul, Minn., representing the Minnesota Twins. McKay had 361 points.

In the 11-year-old category, Larry Anthony, Monroe, La., representing the Houston Astros, had 399 points, beating Jim Demmel, Omaha, Neb., representing the Kansas City Royals of the American League, with 304 points.

In the 10-year-old group, the American League's Larry Smulowitz of Kingston, Pa., representing the Chicago White Sox, had 350 points, defeating the National League champion, Wesley Giles, Sanford, N. C., representing the Atlanta Braves, with 231 points.

Jeff Hornacek, North Riverside, Ill., got 379 points to win the 9-year-old category for the American League's Chicago White Sox, defeating Steven Evans, Springfield, Ohio, representing the Cincinnati Reds, with 264 points.

The eight contestants became finalists by compiling the most points in accuracy and distance in the categories of pitching, hitting and throwing. The boys previously had won local and district competitions.

Newcombe, Okker advance

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI)—Top-seeded John Newcombe and defending champion Tom Okker advanced Tuesday from first-round matches of the $50,000 First National Tennis Classic.

Newcombe blended a devastating serve with accurate placements to subdue fellow Australian Phil Dent 6-3, 6-3, after falling behind 3-1 in the first set.

Okker, a tireless retriever, whipped Brian Fairlie of New Zealand 7-5, 6-1.

Left-hander Tony Roche, winner of the Washington Star International Tournament last Sunday, defeated Roy Barth, 6-3, 6-3.

In other first-round matches, Mark Cox downed Ray Ruffels 7-4, 6-1; Marty Riessen conquered Terry Addison 7-5, 6-0; and Charles Pasarell won over Bob Carmichael 6-4, 2-6, 6-4.

Bulls sold to Chicago syndicate

CHICAGO (UPI)—Owners of the Chicago Bulls voted Tuesday to sell the National Basketball Association team to a syndicate of Chicago bidders.

A brief statement said the owners unanimously accepted an offer to purchase from a group headed by Joe Cook, which also includes Lester Crown, Arthur Wirtz and Phil Klutznick.

The board of governors of the NBA will be asked to approve the sale next Friday.

It was expected the transfer of the franchise would be approved. The board of governors previously rejected the sale of the club to another group headed by Marvin Fishman. Rejection was based on the fact that this group had no arena available to play and after it made arrangements for the Bulls to play in the Amphitheatre, approval again was denied.

The Cook organization has a 10-year contract for the team to play in the Chicago Stadium, owned by Wirtz.

Net results, matches are announced

STROUDSBURG — Number one-seeded Bobbie Wilke and Sherwood Samet advanced to the quarter-finals of the Stroudsburg Mixed Doubles Tennis Tournament with a 6-1, 6-1 decision over Barbara and Charlie Reese.

No. 3 seeded Sharon and Herb Hummers topped Renee Altemose and Walt Cole, 6-4, 6-2, while Denise Lisicky and Thad Laskowski took a 6-3, 6-2 nod over Caroline and Bill Austell.

In other action, Gloria Briggs and Joe Villiano also moved into the quarter-finals with a 6-0, 6-3 decision over Joanne and Bill Cassebaum.

Thursday nights schedule will find Wilke-Samet taking on Lisicky-Laskowski, Briggs-Villiano opposing the Hummers, Austell-McClelland taking on Cassebaum-Hay and the winners of the Smith matches opposing Waring-Dixon. Dracos-Dracos will match up with Collins-Cohen in another match.

Chamberlain, Lakers having $$ problems

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Wilt Chamberlain wants more money but claims he's getting the cold shoulder from Jack Kent Cooke, owner of the Los Angeles Lakers.

Chamberlain and his lawyer, Seymour S. Goldberg, took their case to the news media Tuesday, complaining Cooke refuses to sit down and talk money with the big center who helped the Lakers in no small way to win the National Basketball Association championships last spring.

Goldberg pointed out in a "news release" that Chamberlain entered into a two-year contract with the Lakers in the latter part of August 1971 when there was a freeze on both wages and prices.

Now, with the freeze thawed, the Lakers have raised their ticket prices by 50 cents a copy for the 1972-73 season.

Goldberg said Chamberlain and he have asked in writing and in a telephone call to talk with Cooke about "appropriate contract readjustments" (a raise) for the 1972-73 season but get no response from the owner nor from the Laker general manager Pete Newell.

The last paragraph of the Goldberg-Chamberlain communique hinted darkly the 7-foot-2-inch Chamberlain may be able to make a better living some place else, saying:

"When, in fact, we do receive a response to our request and understand Mr. Cooke's position more fully, Mr. Chamberlain will then be in a better position to evaluate the many other offers made to him, outside of basketball, for the next season."

Lilly explains Dallas success

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (UPI)—One of the members of the world champion Dallas Cowboys believes the club has reached its current level of success because of an attitude change in Coach Tom Landry.

Bob Lilly, the Cowboys mountainous defensive tackle, thinks Dallas began its push to the top when Landry stopped "pushing himself to the limit, mentally and physically, working 20 hours a day."

The Cowboys open the pro football season Friday night in Chicago against the College All-Stars.

It is not hard to spot the point where the Dallas club began to be a Super Bowl threat. It came the week after the Cowboys had been decimated by St. Louis, 38-0, in the middle of the 1970 season.

Since then the Cowboys have won 27 games (including preseason and playoffs) and lost four.

"We'd proved we were capable of being in the playoffs," Lilly said in an interiew with Frank Luksa of the Dallas Times Herald. "But everyone always belittled the Eastern Division.

"Football publications had written us off as losers. This was after we had lost to Cleveland (in the playoffs for the second straight season in 1969).

"I think Coach Landry, because of this, sort of pushed himself to the limit, mentally and physically, working 20 hours a day. He was trying to make everything perfect, to overcome the damage done mentally.

"After the St. Louis game (which dropped the Cowboys two games behind the Cardinals in the division standings) the pressure was removed. We were written off.

"The next week we played a loose defensive game. As we won one or two more we got our confidence back.

"At this time Landry was still in control, but he let the assistants use more of their ideas. Before, he was in every meeting. In one, he told us about defense; then he told them on offense, then he was in the quarterback meetings and the linebacker meetings.

Giants drop five players

WEST LONG BRANCH, N.J.(UPI) — The New York Giants today dropped five players from their roster, leaving their list at 69 with 66 in camp.

Dismissed were Ernie Altimirano, a center from C.W. Post who was a free agent; Skip Butler, a kicker who had been signed by the Giants in mid-season of 1971 after his release by the New Orleans Saints; Tim Delaney, a wide receiver from San Diego State; Neovia Greyer, a defensive back from Wisconsin who was the 16th draft pick, and Paul Rogers, a kicker from Nebraska who was a free agent.

Cardinals make roster changes

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI)—The St. Louis Cardinals recalled pitcher Ray Bare from their Tulsa farm club and outfielder Jorge Rogue from their Arkansas club, General Manager Bing Devine announced Tuesday.

Bare, a 23-year-old righthanded relief pitcher, will replace Lowell Palmer who is serving a two-week Army Reserve commitment.

A native of Puerto Rico, Rogue, 22, will replace outfielder Brant Alyea on the 25-man roster.

Bare and Rogue will join the club in time for a workout today at Busch Stadium and accompany the Cardinals to Montreal and Chicago.

Gibby gets N.L. award

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Bob Gibson, pitching ace of the St. Louis Cardinals, was named Tuesday as National League Player of the Week.

Charles S. Feeney, league president, said Gibson won the honor by chalking up the longest win streak in the major leagues this year with his 10th and 11th successive victories, beating the Astros July 17 and Atlanta July 21.

In the 2-1 win over the Braves, Gibson hit his fourth home run of the season and the 21st of his career, more than any other active big league pitcher.

Stocks lose early rally

NEW YORK (UPI)—Stocks prices dropped Tuesday as a rally begun late Friday lost its punch because of profit taking and a lack of buying interest. Trading on the New York Stock exchange was moderately active.

Standard & Poor's 500 stock index reversed course and lost 0.32 to 107.60. The average price of a New York Stock Exchange common share decreased by 12 cents.

Declines outnumbered advances, 791 to 652, among the 1,773 issues crossing the tape. Turnover totaled 17,180,000 shares, down slightly from the 18,020,000 traded Monday.

"The economic news that sparked Monday's rise apparently was not strong enough to keep up a sustained rally," Robert Johnson, analyst for Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis, said. "There still are a lot of uncertainties around, particularly the international monetary problems," he said.

Monte Gordon, analyst for Sartorius & Co., said in view of the action during this session, "Monday's gain looks more like an emotional one. It might be called technical." Gordon said he did not think the market had found a bottom and was headed back down toward the 910 level of the DJIA.

The market started out higher, appearing to continue to react favorably to reports the real gross national product had risen sharply in the second quarter and inflation's rate had been cut. But the market got softer around midsession.

Brunswick Corp. as the most active issue, off 1⅞ at 42⅛ on 481,600 shares, including a block of 325,000 shares at 40, off 4.

Occidental Petroleum was second off ½ at 14⅛ on 330,300 shares. The issue has been soft this week after making a sharp rise last week on news Occidental had reached an agreement with the Soviet Union. Many analysts said the rise was unwarranted.

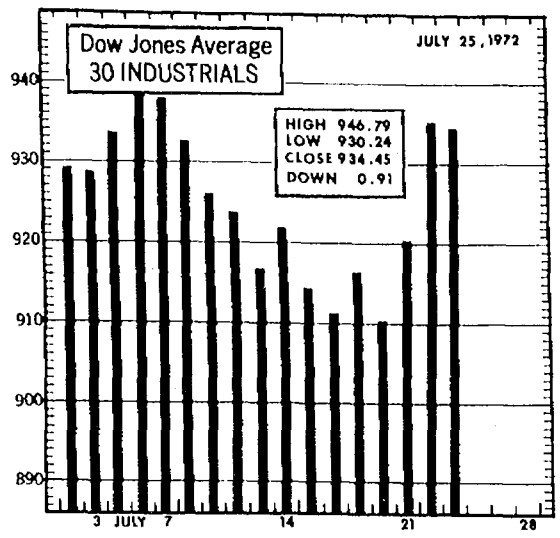

Jersey Standard was third, off 2¾ at 74⅞ on 214,600 shares. Late Monday, Jersey Standard reported its second quarter net fell to $1.48 a share from $1.57 the year before.

Wrigley made the best showing among the glamors, rising 4½. The firm reported higher second quarter earnings. Also, directors declared an extra dividend of $1.25.

Corning Glass gained 2¼. Polaroid plunged 5⅛, Bausch & Lomb 3⅛, Walt Disney 2½, Itek 1⅝, Liggett & Myers 1¾ and Xerox 1.

General Development lost 3¾ and Mohawk Data Sciences 2½.

Prices moved lower in fairly active trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex index dipped 0.06 to 26.88. Turnover totaled 3,630,000 shares, compared with the 3,780,000 traded Monday.

ITT, still gunshy, opens hotel with little fanfare

BUENOS AIRES (UPI)—The ITT conglomerate's Sheraton hotel chain has opened this capital's largest hotel, the 800-room Buenos Aires Sheraton, without fanfare of even a ribbon-cutting.

ITT's tarnished public relations image as result of Chile's claims of alleged intervention in its internal affairs had nothing to do with the low key opening, manager Frank Vidal said.

He said a full-blown inauguration will be held later.

Another hotel executive said hydraulic-driven glass doors for the main ballroom were stuck in customs, and they were to play a major role in the formal opening.

The July 1 opening without so much as a newspaper advertisement nonetheless, was considered unusual. Hotel men recalled that Sheraton executives went all out for the 1970 inauguration of the San Cristobal Sheraton in Santiago, Chile, shortly after Marxist Salvador Allende won the presidency there.

Later, purloined ITT memos found their way into the public domain through Washington columnist Jack Anderson, purporting that ITT had attempted to interest other corporations and the U.S. government in an effort to topple Allende.

The revelations were frontpage fare throughout Latin America.

During last April's trade union elections here, a leftist "blue slate" of candidates included in its platform demands that the Argentine government:

—Ban ITT from the nation forever.

—Confiscate Standard Electric, an ITT telephone equipment manufacturing subsidiary.

—Confiscate the then-uncompleted Sheraton hotel and hand it over to the state airline, Aerolineas Argentinas, for management.

The action was proposed to forestall possible ITT "internal intervention in Argentina."

The platform was published in newspaper ads in the form of an open letter to military President Alejandro A. Lanusse.

The "blue slate" lost the elections.

Shortly after the "sneak" inauguration, the hotel was housing a goodly number of Japanese, Brazilian and American travelers, many of them recommended by Sheraton hotels abroad.

Aside from being Buenos Aires' largest, the new $25 million hotel appeared worthy of a highly touted opening. It boasts a convention hall, a 230-seat concert auditorium, two tennis courts, a large pool, coffee shop and restaurant. Each of the 800 rooms has a television set and direct dial telephone. A conveyer belt whisks luggage into the lobby. There are 750 employes.

The roof-top bar affords alternate views of Buenos Aires' busy port, or the center of the city's 8-million people. Prices are reasonale by Buenos Aires standards.

Although the coffeeshop, "La Pampa," offers hot dogs and hamburgers, the hotel does not suffer an Americanization deficiency noted by worldly travelers in Chile's San cristobal Sheraton.

"Every bathrom has a bidet," manager Vidal said.

Stocks lose early rally

NEW YORK (UPI)—Stocks prices dropped Tuesday as a rally begun late Friday lost its punch because of profit taking and a lack of buying interest. Trading on the New York Stock exchange was moderately active.

The Dow Jones average of 30 selected blue-chip industrials, ahead 6 at one point, lost 0.91 to 934.45 on the day. It gained 14.91 Monday, its best advance of the year.

Standard & Poor's 500 stock index reversed course and lost 0.32 to 107.60. The average price of a New York Stock Exchange common share decreased by 12 cents.

Declines outnumbered advances, 791 to 652, among the 1,773 issues crossing the tape. Turnover totaled 17,180,000 shares, down slightly from the 18,020,000 traded Monday.

"The economic news that sparked Monday's rise apparently was not strong enough to keep up a sustained rally," Robert Johnson, analyst for Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis, said. "There still are a lot of uncertainties around, particularly the international monetary problems," he said.

Monte Gordon, analyst for Sartorius & Co., said in view of the action during this session, "Monday's gain looks more like an emotional one. It might be called technical." Gordon said he did not think the market had found a bottom and was headed back down toward the 910 level of the DJIA.

The market started out higher, appearing to continue to react favorably to reports the real gross national product had risen sharply in the second quarter and inflation's rate had been cut. But the market got softer around midsession.

Brunswick Corp. as the most active issue, off 1⅞ at 42⅛ on 481,600 shares, including a block of 325,000 shares at 40, off 4.

Occidental Petroleum was second off ½ at 14⅛ on 330,300 shares. The issue has been soft this week after making a sharp rise last week on news Occidental had reached an agreement with the Soviet Union. Many analysts said the rise was unwarranted.

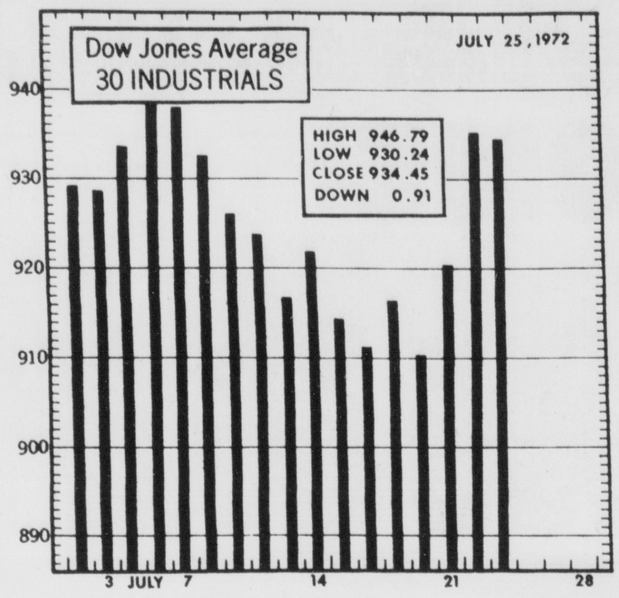

Jersey Standard was third, off 2¾ at 74⅞ on 214,600 shares. Late Monday, Jersey Standard reported its second quarter net fell to $1.48 a share from $1.57 the year before.

Wrigley made the best showing among the glamors, rising 4½. The firm reported higher second quarter earnings. Also, directors declared an extra dividend of $1.25.

Corning Glass gained 2¼. Polaroid plunged 5⅛, Bausch & Lomb 3⅛, Walt Disney 2½, Itek 1⅝, Liggett & Myers 1¾ and Xerox 1.

General Development lost 3¾ and Mohawk Data Sciences 2½.

Prices moved lower in fairly active trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex index dipped 0.06 to 26.88. Turnover totaled 3,630,000 shares, compared with the 3,780,000 traded Monday.

ITT, still gunshy, opens hotel with little fanfare

BUENOS AIRES (UPI)—The ITT conglomerate's Sheraton hotel chain has opened this capital's largest hotel, the 800-room Buenos Aires Sheraton, without fanfare of even a ribbon-cutting.

ITT's tarnished public relations image as result of Chile's claims of alleged intervention in its internal affairs had nothing to do with the low key opening, manager Frank Vidal said.

He said a full-blown inauguration will be held later.

Another hotel executive said hydraulic-driven glass doors for the main ballroom were stuck in customs, and they were to play a major role in the formal opening.

The July 1 opening without so much as a newspaper advertisement nonetheless, was considered unusual. Hotel men recalled that Sheraton executives went all out for the 1970 inauguration of the San Cristobal Sheraton in Santiago, Chile, shortly after Marxist Salvador Allende won the presidency there.

Later, purloined ITT memos found their way into the public domain through Washington columnist Jack Anderson, purporting that ITT had attempted to interest other corporations and the U.S. government in an effort to topple Allende.

The revelations were frontpage fare throughout Latin America.

During last April's trade union elections here, a leftist "blue slate" of candidates included in its platform demands that the Argentine government:

—Ban ITT from the nation forever.

—Confiscate Standard Electric, an ITT telephone equipment manufacturing subsidiary.

—Confiscate the then-uncompleted Sheraton hotel and hand it over to the state airline, Aerolineas Argentinas, for management.

The action was proposed to forestall possible ITT "internal intervention in Argentina."

The platform was published in newspaper ads in the form of an open letter to military President Alejandro A. Lanusse.

The "blue slate" lost the elections.

Shortly after the "sneak" inauguration, the hotel was housing a goodly number of Japanese, Brazilian and American travelers, many of them recommended by Sheraton hotels abroad.

Aside from being Buenos Aires' largest, the new $25 million hotel appeared worthy of a highly touted opening. It boasts a convention hall, a 230-seat concert auditorium, two tennis courts, a large pool, coffee shop and restaurant. Each of the 800 rooms has a television set and direct dial telephone. A conveyer belt whisks luggage into the lobby. There are 750 employes.

The roof-top bar affords alternate views of Buenos Aires' busy port, or the center of the city's 8-million people. Prices are reasonale by Buenos Aires standards.

Although the coffeeshop, "La Pampa," offers hot dogs and hamburgers, the hotel does not suffer an Americanization deficiency noted by worldly travelers in Chile's San cristobal Sheraton.

"Every bathrom has a bidet," manager Vidal said.

Mafia comes under close scrutiny of anthropologists

NEW YORK (UPI)—Anthropology, once used mainly for backward glances at primitive Indian tribes, has been applied to a modern-day tribal institution—the Mafia.

The scientist who did it, Frances Ianni, an anthropologist of Italian-American extraction, says the days of the Italian crime-lords are numbered and that blacks and Latin Americans will soon control the underworld.

In fact, Ianni believes the shooting of Joseph Colombo by a black man last year may have been the opening salvo in a gigantic crime war between blacks and Italians.

"It's the old story," he said in an interview. "The people from the old country build something up, and then their kids move away to the suburbs. Within 20 years, all the old so-called Mafia families will be entirely legitimate. Blacks, Puerto Ricans and Cubans will control the crime."

Ianni, an anthropology and education professor at Columbia University in New York, spent three years preparing a study of the Mafia, first in the rugged hills of Sicily, then with the key members of a prominent New York Mafia family. The results are documented in a recently published book, "A Family business: Kinship and Social Control in Organized Crime."

In it, Ianni terms blacks the next "dominant ethnic group" most ready to move into the "mainstream of white, middle-class America, but unable to do so."

He says this makes them ripe for taking over crime on a large-scale, and notes that about 25 per cent of New York City's numbers games are already in black control.

"They've taken over a large part of Harlem from the Mafia on a concession basis, and there hasn't been much violence there," he said. "But in other areas, there are indications of blacks being killed in gangland wars."

He says the police "assume that Jerome Johnson (the black man who shot Colombo) was either an assassin hired by the Mafia, or a nut, but I think it's at least a possibility he may have been working for blacks seeking more control of criminal activities."

Ianni said there could be more violence in this "ethnic succession," but that it was difficult to predict.

He claims the recent spate of Italian gangland killings "may be the last dying gasp of Italian crime control, with the old rules being disregarded." He said the killing of Brooklyn mobster Joey Gallo in front of his family would have been unthinkable a few years ago.

Ianni noted the Irish were the first to control organized crime in the early part of the century, followed by Jews, who controlled most of it during the 1920's.

"The Italians are taking the longest time to get out because of their strong feelings of distrust for people outside their families and because they've been stereotyped out of legitimate business," he said.

"I'm an Italian-American—I want to make that perfectly clear—but it's really true that having a name that ends in a vowel — being Italian — makes one suspect... perfectly legitimate businessmen can be suspect if they have Italian names. Everyone thinks they have 'connections.'"

Ianni's first contact with a member of his model "family" came in a Congressman's office in Washington where he met the family's "lobbyist."

"He was introduced to me as 'one outstanding Italian-American to another,'" he said.

He spent two years with the family, for whom he uses the name "Lupollo," interviewing them, eating dinner with them and going to their weddings. He says that while he was never an insider, many family members opened up. Others "didn't like me at all and thought I was up to no good."

As a result of the study, Ianni paints a gloomy picture for the Mafia's current set-up, despite its flourishing business in both legal and illegal enterprises.

He says the pressures of American culture which long ago broke up the traditional family structures of most other ethnic groups are finally striking at Italian-Americans generally and the Mafia families in particular.

But a complicating factor, Ianni says, is that while the Italian-Americans are trying to leave organized crime, their movement into legitimate businesses will continue to be hampered by public suspicion.

"It is amazing to me that now that these families are trying to become legitimate, the focus now is on the 'infiltration' of the Mafia into honest businesses," says Ianni. "It is a tragedy that Italians had their turn at organized crime at a time when it first began to get such widespread public attention."

Crafts display slated

PETERS VALLEY, N.J. — Nearly 40 craftsmen, many giving demonstrations of their work, will be at the third annual crafts fair at Peters Valley, N.J., from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

While some activities will be carried on indoors, notably in the craftsmen's studios, the fair is essentially an outdoors event, said Mrs. Britt Puleo, in charge of the project.

It is expected the demonstrations, largely by resident craftsmen, will include spinning, blacksmithing, woodworking, dyeing with natural dyes, and the operation of the potter's wheel.

Mrs. Sally Francisco, president of the craftsmen's group and administrator of the villiage, noted a wide range of objects will be on exhibit and for sale at the fair, including leatherwork, ironwork, jewelry, woven articles, macrame, and ceramics.

Hilltop Farm is the center of activities at Peters Valley, not only for the fair itself, but for year-round activities, including summer school sessions in crafts activities. Visitors to the fair may secure information on one-day workshops offered at regular intervals. These short-term activities include woodblock printing, dyeing with natural dyes, and macrame. A five-day series of workshops in rug making will extend from July 31 to August 4.

The Peters Valley Crafts Center, an enterprise run cooperatively with the National Park Service of the U.S. Department of the Interior, may be reached from Route 206, south of Milford; from Route 209 by crossing the Delaware River at Dingman's Ferry; or, northward from the Delaware Water Gap by taking the Millbrook-Flatbrookville exit on the New Jersey side of the Delaware Water Gap toll bridge.

Further information on Peters Valley activities can be obtained from Peters Craftsmen, Inc., Layton, N.J., or from the Delaware Water Gap Recreation Area headquarters, Columbia, N.J.

Jack O'Brian's

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — Three cheers and a tiger, or in this case probably a herd of elephants, for Radio City Music Hall, the most important movie and presentation house in the world, one of the two theaters in the U.S. still presenting, along with the best morally tenable motion pictures, vaudeville; the other American theater offering vaudeville is the Apollo in Harlem, all-black shows, though owned by an all-white management.

Radio City Music Hall certainly is the top showbiz attractions for visitors to New York City; in a community where "tourist attraction" is a pejorative generally, such opprobrium does not extend to the Music Hall, which could not function financially without either the tourist trade or the constant attendance of local New York area ticket buyers.

It is huge — some 6,200 seats — and it is comfortable, its attractions always geared to be enjoyed ideally from every seat in the majestic house. Its stage attractions are constructed shrewdly to the spacious size. Those seated up close are overwhelmed by the actual magnitude of the sets and the styles of the visual-first performers. From the top (3rd) balcony seats, with no obstruction in the way of poles, girders or anything, the canny deployment of sets and "sight acts" make it possible for no one to be underwhelmed; everyone is whelmed.

Our three cheers and a dinosaur-size salute to Radio City Music Hall today is in anticipation of its 40th anniversary as America's premiere showshop this year — it opened in '32 — as well as a quietly delivered report from the brothers Rockefeller, owners of the Music Hall and some 21 subsequent skyscraping buildings which make up Rockefeller Center, that this imposing and estimable showplace will not be torn down to make room for another huge office building ... This has been a constantly irritating rumor these last ten years, and we now have been assured on highest authority that it is not in the works, or pomps, of the rich but community-respectful Rockefeller family to erase this fascinating entertainment facility from their world-famed architectural complex. For which the aforenoted three-cheered tiger.

Radio City Music Hall was a marvelous conception, but its entertainment plans were changed abruptly after its very first week, its very first multi-attraction. The very notion of a Radio City Music Hall, in fact of a Rockefeller Center, had its tiny root in the flamboyant imagination of one Samuel L. Rothafel, a legendary showman in every way, more functionally sensational in his daringly possible whims than Florenz Ziegfeld, who glorified and was glorified by Broadway on the basis of considerably fewer entrepreneurable gifts than the late gentleman known as "Roxy," the same S. L. Rothafel.

The Rockefellers weren't even among its founding dreamers they included Roxy, of course, and NBC's Merlin H. Aylesworth (that "Merlin" connoted a magician of earth-bound ability to execute Roxy's fantasy.) These practical dreamers then involved the renowned and celebrated first head of the Radio Corporation of America, David Sarnoff, the primitive visionary who created RCA, NBC radio and TV and myriad marvels of electronics which are his enduring monument. Roxy got Dave Sarnoff interested, then enlisted financier and industrialist Owen Young, who reached out to RKO (Radio-Keith-Orpheum), a showbiz conglomerate of stage-screen-radio interests.

It was early 1929 but still television, a gleam in the progressive Sarnoff retina, was envisioned part of the new Music Hall. Sarnoff and Roxy saw it as an arena for every entertainment element, including opera, ballet, concerts, vaudeville; you dream it and Roxy had planned it. The Rockefellers then decided to join the consortium as part of their then unstarted Rockefeller Center.

Rothafel's earlier dream had resulted in a previous big Broadway theater, The Roxy. It seated "only" 3,700, and he had been held to that meagre capacity by the overly functional conservatism of William Fox, head of the Fox Film Co. Even so, Roxy had installed in the Roxy Theater some elements which later were transferred to Radio City Music Hall.

It was typical of the seemingly conservative Rockefellers that they saw immediately the distant triumps of the twice-as-large Music Hall. In the Roxy, its boss had installed, for instance, Russell Markert, who had created "The Roxyettes," named for Rothafel. Coincidentally, Markert, a diverted Wall Streeter with a love for dancing, had begun as a chorus dancer, proceeded to choreography, had toured a dancing troupe of his own called "The Missouri Rockets;" the switch to "Roxyettes" was a mini-semanticism as was eventual progress to his choreographing the 36-girl "Rockettes," now deservedly world-renowned. (More Music Hall lore tomorrow).

Those friendly Britons

NEW YORK (UPI) — British friendliness is what draws more Americans to Britain than any other European country each year, according to a survey conducted by the British Tourist Authority.

Of visitors questioned, 31 per cent said they were most impressed by the "friendly and hospitable people." Thirty per cent listed "places and buildings of historic association" and 23 per cent said they liked the "green and beautiful scenery."

Miserly youth

My neighbor, Wanda Weird, was complaining to me the other day about her son. "That kid is going to drive me crazy," she said. "Everytime I turn around he wants to be paid for what he does. Do you know what he had the nerve to give me on Mother's Day? He gave me a chintzy little plaque made out of library paste and toothpicks that he made himself."

"I think that's rather sweet," I said.

"From a 19-year-old boy?"

I know how Wanda feels. Our son's middle name is, "Do I have to use my own money?" Some years ago, in a burst of parental insanity, we initiated the "allowance" system at our house. We thought it would be an incentive to do a good job, instill a firsthand working knowledge of how our free enterprise system works, and give him a feeling of financial independence. We didn't know then he was saving up for a downpayment to buy Nevada.

'Float' plan safety factor

Before you get underway in your boat, file a "float plan" with a friend, relative or someone at your marina. A float plan consists of information which could help the Coast Guard find you if you fail to return from your outing.

It should include the boat's description, registration number, safety equipment, persons on board, destination, time of departure and arrival, and the course you intend to take. Be sure to notify this person upon your return to prevent any false alarms about your safety.

What do we get for our $2 a week?

We get the table cleared whether we are still eating or not. I have had my coffee cup snatched from my mouth while my lips were still blistering.

We get a decision maker who decides that the remains of a $6 sirloin should be tossed down the disposer while a peach seed floating in a bowl of syrup should be saved in the refrigerator.

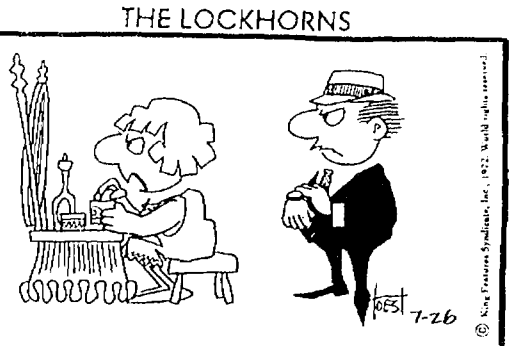

We get a garbage hustler whose open lid policy has attracted dogs who have taken buses to get to our garbage can smorgasbord each night.

Every week, his money goes into the bank, giving life to a new adage, "It is better to receive than to give." Whether it's gum, a movie, a poster, a record, there is always the perennial, "Do I have to use my own money?"

Yesterday, we stopped in front of an ice cream parlor and I could just anticipate his next question. So I said to him, "I do not think you realize that it costs parents $147,154 to raise just one child. That includes education, health expenses, clothes, housing, food, and the potential salary of a mother who might have worked but stayed at home to raise the child. There is some sacrifice involved. Of course, we wouldn't have it any other way. But think about it. Imagine that in a lifetime your father and I will have coughed up $147,154 on your behalf."

He was silent for a moment, then got out of the car and went in for the ice cream. When he returned, he handed me a cone and said, "I only got one dip each for us. I didn't think you could afford two dips each."

Do you know what he had the nerve to give me on Mother's Day? He gave me a chintzy little plaque made out of library paste and toothpicks that he made himself."

"I think that's rather sweet," I said.

"From a 19-year-old boy?"

I know how Wanda feels. Our son's middle name is, "Do I have to use my own money?" Some years ago, in a burst of parental insanity, we initiated the "allowance" system at our house. We thought it would be an incentive to do a good job, instill a firsthand working knowledge of how our free enterprise system works, and give him a feeling of financial independence. We didn't know then he was saving up for a downpayment to buy Nevada.

What do we get for our $2 a week?

We get the table cleared whether we are still eating or not. I have had my coffee cup snatched from my mouth while my lips were still blistering.

We get a decision maker who decides that the remains of a $6 sirloin should be tossed down the disposer while a peach seed floating in a bowl of syrup should be saved in the refrigerator.

We get a garbage hustler whose open lid policy has attracted dogs who have taken buses to get to our garbage can smorgasbord each night.

Every week, his money goes into the bank, giving life to a new adage, "It is better to receive than to give." Whether it's gum, a movie, a poster, a record, there is always the perennial, "Do I have to use my own money?"

Yesterday, we stopped in front of an ice cream parlor and I could just anticipate his next question. So I said to him, "I do not think you realize that it costs parents $147,154 to raise just one child. That includes education, health expenses, clothes, housing, food, and the potential salary of a mother who might have worked but stayed at home to raise the child. There is some sacrifice involved. Of course, we wouldn't have it any other way. But think about it. Imagine that in a lifetime your father and I will have coughed up $147,154 on your behalf."

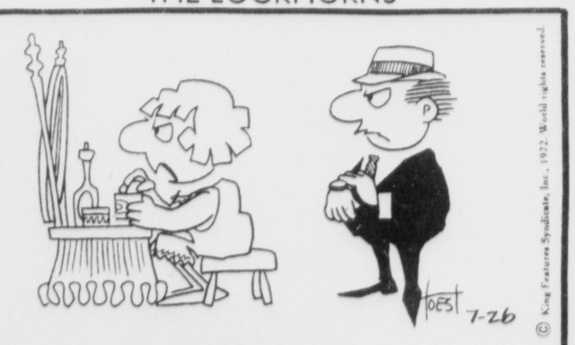

He was silent for a moment, then got out of the car and went in for the ice cream. When he returned, he handed me a cone and said, "I only got one dip each for us. I didn't think you could afford two dips each."

'Float' plan safety factor

Before you get underway in your boat, file a "float plan" with a friend, relative or someone at your marina. A float plan consists of information which could help the Coast Guard find you if you fail to return from your outing.

It should include the boat's description, registration number, safety equipment, persons on board, destination, time of departure and arrival, and the course you intend to take. Be sure to notify this person upon your return to prevent any false alarms about your safety.

Ann Landers

Bitter lesson

Dear Ann Landers: I would like to say a few words to that woman who was mad at her folks. She called them rotten grandparents because they refused to be available whenever she wanted to dump her children so she and her husband could enjoy weekends out of town.

I am a living example of why grandparents should not get involved. Last Saturday I lost my beautiful grandson. This child meant more to me than any living creature. His mother went to work and asked me if I would take complete charge of the baby. At first I didn't know whether I had the strength at my age to accept the responsibility, (he was only five weeks old), but I agreed to try. Within a month I lost my heart completely to that little boy.

Now, 18 months later, my daughter-in-law announces, out of the blue, that she and my son are getting a divorce and she is leaving in three days — with the baby — to live in another state with her parents.

I have died a thousand deaths since that day. The emptiness in my heart is indescribable. I never dreamed I could ache so much.

I am not blaming anyone, but this has taught me a bitter lesson. Never again will I become so involved with a grandchild.

Heartsick

Dear H.: Surely you don't regret having taken the child. He brought you much happiness. These are the things you should remember and be grateful for.

If you have love to give, why not take a foster child into your home? There are many youngsters who need what you have to offer. Please consider it, dear.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you printed a letter from a 16-year-old girl whose mother humiliated her by yelling into the phone (loud enough for her boyfriend to hear) "Tell whoever it is that you aren't allowed to talk forever on a school night — then get off!"

You seemed extremely sympathetic to the girl but showed no understanding whatever for the mother. Your answer was a great disappointment to me because I've always considered you a help to mothers. This time you really let us down.

I have two teen-agers who tie up our phone five days a week from 3:00 until 10:00 p.m. On weekends, it's worse — unless they are out somewhere. Grandparents, doctors and friends cannot get through. I can't tell you how often I've been told, "Your phone is ALWAYS busy. I've given up trying to call you."

I am sick and tired of the younger generation being resentful when limits are put on them. My children have caused me to lose my composure many times because they abused the telephone. If teen-agers would be considerate and thoughtful their mothers would not need to scream into the telephone and embarrass them.

Sinking In New Haven

Dear Sink: If you were unhappy with my first response you're going to be a lot unhappier with this one. What's the matter with you that you haven't set up some rules regarding the telephone and seen to it that those rules are respected? A mother who would permit her teen-agers to tie up the only phone in the house for seven hours, five days a week, has abdicated her responsibility. Of course kids resent limits — but limits are essential, and beneath the resentment, kids WANT guidelines. Adolescents who can do as they please are insecure, and unhappy. They fell that no one cares enough about them to enforce discipline. So get though, Mother. Your children will respect you for it.

It's not always easy to recognize love, especially the first time around. Acquaint yourself with the guidelines, Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Love Or Sex And How To Tell The Difference." For a copy, mail 35 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to this newspaper.

Teen Forum

Lonely boy

By Jean Adams

OUTSIDER? (Q.) I'm sure you've heard of my problem before — I'm terribly lonely. Oh, I've got friends, but they are not close like the friends other people have. I never go anywhere with them. To be frank they are not really friends.

They never invite me anywhere. I got invited to only one party last year and that was because I'm in the high school band and the party was for the band so everybody in it was invited.

When I ask a girl out on a date, I get flimsy excuses which mean no. Help me!

On the Outside in Ohio

(A.) Don't be so negative and you won't be so lonely. You feel like an outsider because you behave like one.

An insider knows that to be in he has to work at it. He doesn't wait for people to invite him. He invites them. He doesn't wait for someone to come to him and make friends with him. He goes out and makes friends with other people. If a girl says no when he asks her for a date he asks another girl.

That is the way to have friends. Select one or two of your acquaintances, either boys or girls, who have something in common with you. Be warm toward them. Let them know you admire them and are interested in them. Work at it.

BACK RUBBING: (Q.) I like this boy and we get along pretty well, but I am afraid he is trying to deceive me. His family came from another country and he talks to me about the customs there. He told me he has two girl cousins, both 17, our age, and that when he visits they call him into the bathroom to rub their backs while they bathe.

He said that when they visit him they come into his bathroom and rub his back. He says he is modest, though, and when they do he wears his swim trunks. He says his family brought the back rubbing custom here from their original country. What do you think is going on? He does not seem like the dirty type.

Shocked in Massachusetts

(A.) Your friend may just be teasing you. But there are many unusual bathing customs around the world, some of which would shock the average American teen-ager.

If your friend is good and decent to you, try not to condemn him for his family's customs. And remember that being jealous of a boyfriend's cousins is asking for trouble, anyway.

(Jean Adams reads and considers every letter, but she regrets that she cannot answer each personally. Mail your questions and comments to Jean Adams, care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 2402, Houston, Texas 77001.)

Check your extinguisher

The fire extinguisher on your boat should be kept in good working condition at all times. Don't test it by squirting small amounts of the agent. It might not work when needed if you do so.

Follow instructions for cleaning, testing, and using your fire extinguisher. They all have instructions printed on them usually somewhere near the Coast Guard approval number.

If you have love to give, why not take a foster child into your home? There are many youngsters who need what you have to offer. Please consider it, dear.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you printed a letter from a 16-year-old girl whose mother humiliated her by yelling into the phone (loud enough for her boyfriend to hear) "Tell whoever it is that you aren't allowed to talk forever on a school night — then get off!"

You seemed extremely sympathetic to the girl but showed no understanding whatever for the mother. Your answer was a great disappointment to me because I've always considered you a help to mothers. This time you really let us down.

I have two teen-agers who tie up our phone five days a week from 3:00 until 10:00 p.m. On weekends, it's worse — unless they are out somewhere. Grandparents, doctors and friends cannot get through. I can't tell you how often I've been told, "Your phone is ALWAYS busy. I've given up trying to call you."

I am sick and tired of the younger generation being resentful when limits are put on them. My children have caused me to lose my composure many times because they abused the telephone. If teen-agers would be considerate and thoughtful their mothers would not need to scream into the telephone and embarrass them.

Sinking In New Haven

Dear Sink: If you were unhappy with my first response you're going to be a lot unhappier with this one. What's the matter with you that you haven't set up some rules regarding the telephone and seen to it that those rules are respected? A mother who would permit her teen-agers to tie up the only phone in the house for seven hours, five days a week, has abdicated her responsibility. Of course kids resent limits — but limits are essential, and beneath the resentment, kids WANT guidelines. Adolescents who can do as they please are insecure, and unhappy. They fell that no one cares enough about them to enforce discipline. So get though, Mother. Your children will respect you for it.

It's not always easy to recognize love, especially the first time around. Acquaint yourself with the guidelines. Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Love Or Sex And How To Tell The Difference." For a copy, mail 35 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to this newspaper.

Lonely boy

By Jean Adams

OUTSIDER? (Q.) I'm sure you've heard of my problem before — I'm terribly lonely. Oh, I've got friends, but they are not close like the friends other people have. I never go anywhere with them. To be frank they are not really friends.

They never invite me anywhere. I got invited to only one party last year and that was because I'm in the high school band and the party was for the band so everybody in it was invited.

When I ask a girl out on a date, I get flimsy excuses which mean no. Help me!

On the Outside in Ohio

(A.) Don't be so negative and you won't be so lonely. You feel like an outsider because you behave like one.

An insider knows that to be in he has to work at it. He doesn't wait for people to invite him. He invites them. He doesn't wait for someone to come to him and make friends with him. He goes out and makes friends with other people. If a girl says no when he asks her for a date he asks another girl.

That is the way to have friends. Select one or two of your acquaintances, either boys or girls, who have something in common with you. Be warm toward them. Let them know you admire them and are interested in them. Work at it.

BACK RUBBING: (Q.) I like this boy and we get along pretty well, but I am afraid he is trying to deceive me. His family came from another country and he talks to me about the customs there. He told me he has two girl cousins, both 17, our age, and that when he visits they call him into the bathroom to rub their backs while they bathe.

He said that when they visit him they come into his bathroom and rub his back. He says he is modest, though, and when they do he wears his swim trunks. He says his family brought the back rubbing custom here from their original country. What do you think is going on? He does not seem like the dirty type.

Shocked in Massachusetts

(A.) Your friend may just be teasing you. But there are many unusual bathing customs around the world, some of which would shock the average American teen-ager.

If your friend is good and decent to you, try not to condemn him for his family's customs. And remember that being jealous of a boyfriend's cousins is asking for trouble, anyway.

(Jean Adams reads and considers every letter, but she regrets that she cannot answer each personally. Mail your questions and comments to Jean Adams, care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 2402, Houston, Texas 77001.)

Check your extinguisher

The fire extinguisher on your boat should be kept in good working condition at all times. Don't test it by squirting small amounts of the agent. It might not work when needed if you do so.

Follow instructions for cleaning, testing, and using your fire extinguisher. They all have instructions printed on them usually somewhere near the Coast Guard approval number.

Royal Wild West Circus to appear

TANNERSVILLE — The Royal Wild West Circus will appear Wednesday off Route 611 between Bartonsville and Tannersville.

Sponsored by the Pocono Mountains Jaycees and the Stroudsburg Lions Club, the circus will hold performances at 4 and 8 p.m. The Royal Circus, the first all-new Wild West circus in more than 50 years, appears exclusively for civic and charitable organizations, making it possible for such groups to raise funds for their community projects while bringing professional entertainment to town.

"The Royal Wild West Circus comes highly recommended by clubs and groups which have presented it as their annual fund raising project," said Burt Kleinle and Raymond Vanderslice, of the two sponsoring organizations.

"Contractual arrangements give us a rich opportunity to realize a considerable sum of money for the community service fund," the two spokesmen said.

Heaviest local proceeds will come from the sale of advance reduced-rate tickets, to be launched by Jaycees and Lions members.

LEO

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) A favorable Mars aspect now gives you a fresh basis for estimating potentials in launching long-range programs. Emphasize enthusiasm, optimism.

April 21 to May 21 (Taurus) Planetary influences only fairly generous, so you will have to provide your own momentum to carry on now. Neither too many problems nor much opposition indicated.

May 22 to June 21 (Gemini) Facing a dilemma? Set about solving it in well-organized fashion — not too hurriedly, not with misgivings. Your innate ingenuity should keep you well on top of any situation.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer) Be strong of purpose, straight in thinking and unyielding in *principles. Acknwledge possi*ble errors, too. This always wins respect, admiration — and cooperation!

July 24 to August 23 (Leo) A day in which you can either follow or lead — but each in its place! Once started on proper procedure, you should sail along nicely.

August 24 to September (Virgo) Happy hunting for the optimistic hunter — who also employs responsible methods. This could be a really big day for you!

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) If you've been interested in a new project, but have postponed taking action on it, now is the time!But be sure you have the know-how and enough data to go on.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) Do not be upset by criticism. If constructive, it could actually show you new ways to capitalize on your inventiveness and skills.

November 23 to December 21 (Sagittarius) You, too, can profit by both opposition and obstacles. Some new ideas could brighten your day, a new method perk up tedious but essential routine.

December 22 to January 20 (Capricorn) A good outlook! Saturn encourages your talents, cleverness at discerning leads and new methods of value, smart action generally.

January 21 to February 19 (Aquarius) Even if time is short and there is much to be accomplished, give yourself enough time for efficient planning. A good day for revitalizing all interests.

February 20 to March 20 (Pisces) Advance a new idea, enlist the help of others to put it across. Under prevailing influences, you should win new benefits, advance your status.

YOU BORN TODAY have been endowed with a high order of intellect, unusual versatility and boundless ambition. You are a great lover of luxuries and the good things of life; will work unremittingly to accumulate the things you want — and usually attain them. You have a flair for the dramatic and would make an outstanding writer, playwright, painter, statesman or lawyer. Despite your fine gifts for organization and management, however, you have a tendency to start things and drop them when you lose interest. Try to curb this trait since it is one which could stand in the way of your ultimate accomplishment. Avoid, also, inclinations toward obstinacy and an insistence on having your own way. Birthdate of: George Bernard Shaw, dramatist, critic; Jean-Baptiste Corot, landscape painter; Aldous Huxley, Eng. author.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Royal Wild West Circus to appear

TANNERSVILLE — The Royal Wild West Circus will appear Wednesday off Route 611 between Bartonsville and Tannersville.

Sponsored by the Pocono Mountains Jaycees and the Stroudsburg Lions Club, the circus will hold performances at 4 and 8 p.m. The Royal Circus, the first all-new Wild West circus in more than 50 years, appears exclusively for civic and charitable organizations, making it possible for such groups to raise funds for their community projects while bringing professional entertainment to town.

"The Royal Wild West Circus comes highly recommended by clubs and groups which have presented it as their annual fund raising project," said Burt Kleinle and Raymond Vanderslice, of the two sponsoring organizations.

"Contractual arrangements give us a rich opportunity to realize a considerable sum of money for the community service fund," the two spokesmen said.

Heaviest local proceeds will come from the sale of advance reduced-rate tickets, to be launched by Jaycees and Lions members.

Your Horoscope

LEO

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) A favorable Mars aspect now gives you a fresh basis for estimating potentials in launching long-range programs. Emphasize enthusiasm, optimism.

April 21 to May 21 (Taurus) Planetary influences only fairly generous, so you will have to provide your own momentum to carry on now. Neither too many problems nor much opposition indicated.

May 22 to June 21 (Gemini) Facing a dilemma? Set about solving it in well-organized fashion — not too hurriedly, not with misgivings. Your innate ingenuity should keep you well on top of any situation.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer) Be strong of purpose, straight in thinking and unyielding in principles. Acknwledge possible errors, too. This always wins respect, admiration — and cooperation!

July 24 to August 23 (Leo) A day in which you can either follow or lead — but each in its place! Once started on proper procedure, you should sail along nicely.

August 24 to September (Virgo) Happy hunting for the optimistic hunter — who also employs responsible methods. This could be a really big day for you!

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) If you've been interested in a new project, but have postponed taking action on it, now is the time!But be sure you have the know-how and enough data to go on.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) Do not be upset by criticism. If constructive, it could actually show you new ways to capitalize on your inventiveness and skills.

November 23 to December 21 (Sagittarius) You, too, can profit by both opposition and obstacles. Some new ideas could brighten your day, a new method perk up tedious but essential routine.

December 22 to January 20 (Capricorn) A good outlook! Saturn encourages your talents, cleverness at discerning leads and new methods of value, smart action generally.

January 21 to February 19 (Aquarius) Even if time is short and there is much to be accomplished, give yourself enough time for efficient planning. A good day for revitalizing all interests.

February 20 to March 20 (Pisces) Advance a new idea, enlist the help of others to put it across. Under prevailing influences, you should win new benefits, advance your status.

YOU BORN TODAY have been endowed with a high order of intellect, unusual versatility and boundless ambition. You are a great lover of luxuries and the good things of life; will work unremittingly to accumulate the things you want — and usually attain them. You have a flair for the dramatic and would make an outstanding writer, playwright, painter, statesman or lawyer. Despite your fine gifts for organization and management, however, you have a tendency to start things and drop them when you lose interest. Try to curb this trait since it is one which could stand in the way of your ultimate accomplishment. Avoid, also, inclinations toward obstinacy and an insistence on having your own way. Birthdate of: George Bernard Shaw, dramatist, critic; Jean-Baptiste Corot, landscape painter; Aldous Huxley, Eng. author.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Worried about answering a blind box number ad? (because you don't know who the advertiser is?)

If you are worried about answering one of these blind ads — since it may be your own firm — simply do this:
Place your letter of application in an envelope addressed to the box number and seal it. Then put the envelope in another envelope addressed to the Classified Dept., The Pocono Record, and enclose the names you do NOT want to receive your reply. Claude S. Cyphers, Inc. of 1713 W. Main St., Stroudsburg, is headquarters in the Poconos for those owning or operating medium or heavy duty trucks. Under the leadership of Carl C. Cyphers, president, the rapidly growing firm offers complete truck services including sales and service of Diamond Reo trucks. "Being the authorized dealer for the 'World's largest and most experienced independent heavy duty truck builder' is a real asset," says Cyphers.

Utilizing over 64,000 square feet of land in Stroud Township just one block from Interstate 80, Cyphers has over 7500 square feet of parts storage and a new 80 ft. x 80 ft. x 18 ft. garage building able to house any size truck permitted to operate in this state of Pennsylvania. Another service offered by Cyphers is "Public Weighing" on a 50 ft., 100,000 lb. of platform scale.

In addition to being the local distributor of Diamond Reo trucks, Cyphers is the authorized distributor for many quality lines of truck parts and equipment necessary in the successful servicing and maintaining of any make truck. Some of the lines Cyphers is proud to represent as distributor are: Anchorlok Spring Brakes; Bendix-Westinghouse Air Brake parts, Baldwin filters, Cato Eye driving lights, Cummins Diesel engines, Delbar mirrors, Do-Ray lighting, Elgin water pumps, Elson engine heaters, Euclid wheel parts, Lipe clutches, Mechanex and Trostel oil seals, Pollock switches, Reyco brake drums and suspension parts, Teck mufflers and pipes, Torque "V" joints, Wagner brake parts, Westinghouse bulbs and Walker wire and cable. The complex operation of ordering, receiving, selling and delivery and servicing this complete compliment of trucks and truck parts is performed by a team of employees at Cyphers, with many years of heavy duty truck experience.

Claude S. Cyphers, Inc., is well known by independent operators, fleet owners and truck service garages within a 150 mile radius of Stroudsburg. These accounts are well serviced by the Cyphers salesmen specializing in solving the truck owners problems. Cyphers is looking forward to yet improving their service and to continuing growth in the years to come.

Claude S. Cyphers, Inc., incorporated in the state of Pennsylvania in 1959, was founded by the late Claude S. Cyphers and his wife, Pauline who is still very active in the everyday operation of the business. Mr. Cyphers started in business in 1940 with one old truck selling and hauling coal. For years, operating from 548 Ann St., he was the supplier of coal to many local homes and also an I.C.C. carrier supplying coal yards throughout New Jersey and New York state. In 1956 Cyphers took on the Diamond T truck franchise and began selling and servicing trucks on a small scale. When the boro of Stroudsburg purchased the property on Ann St., for a parking lot in 1965, Claude S. Cyphers, Inc. moved its operations to its present location on West Main St. in Stroudsburg.

Cyphers, president, the rapidly growing firm offers complete truck services including sales and service of Diamond Reo trucks. "Being the authorized dealer for the 'World's largest and most experienced independent heavy duty truck builder' is a real asset," says Cyphers.

Utilizing over 64,000 square feet of land in Stroud Township just one block from Interstate 80, Cyphers has over 7500 square feet of parts storage and a new 80 ft. x 80 ft. x 18 ft. garage building able to house any size truck permitted to operate in this state of Pennsylvania. Another service offered by Cyphers is "Public Weighing" on a 50 ft., 100,000 lb. of platform scale.

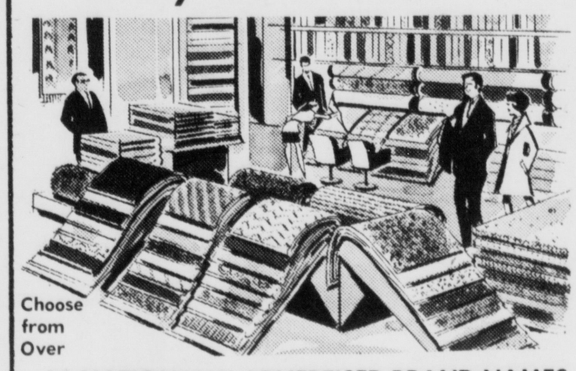

In addition to being the local distributor of Diamond Reo trucks, Cyphers is the authorized distributor for many quality lines of truck parts and equipment necessary in the successful servicing and maintaining of any make truck. Some of the lines Cyphers is proud to represent as distributor are: Anchorlok Spring Brakes; Bendix-Westinghouse Air Brake parts, Baldwin filters, Cato Eye driving lights, Cummins Diesel engines, Delbar mirrors, Do-Ray lighting, Elgin water pumps, Elson engine heaters, Euclid wheel parts, Lipe clutches, Mechanex and Trostel oil seals, Pollock switches, Reyco brake drums and suspension parts, Teck mufflers and pipes, Torque "V" joints, Wagner brake parts, Westinghouse bulbs and Walker wire and cable. The complex operation of ordering, receiving, selling and delivery and servicing this complete compliment of trucks and truck parts is performed by a team of employees at Cyphers, with many years of heavy duty truck experience.

Claude S. Cyphers, Inc., is well known by independent operators, fleet owners and truck service garages within a 150 mile radius of Stroudsburg. These accounts are well serviced by the Cyphers salesmen specializing in solving the truck owners problems. Cyphers is looking forward to yet improving their service and to continuing growth in the years to come.

Claude S. Cyphers, Inc., incorporated in the state of Pennsylvania in 1959, was founded by the late Claude S. Cyphers and his wife, Pauline who is still very active in the everyday operation of the business. Mr. Cyphers started in business in 1940 with one old truck selling and hauling coal. For years, operating from 548 Ann St., he was the supplier of coal to many local homes and also an I.C.C. carrier supplying coal yards throughout New Jersey and New York state. In 1956 Cyphers took on the Diamond T truck franchise and began selling and servicing trucks on a small scale. When the boro of Stroudsburg purchased the property on Ann St., for a parking lot in 1965, Claude S. Cyphers, Inc. moved its operations to its present location on West Main St. in Stroudsburg.
